GERMANS STRIKING AT LAST GREAT POLISH FORTRESS

TEUTONS LAUNCHING DRIVE UPON GROVNO

Austro--Germans Capture Town of Lipsk by Storm, Forcing Surrender of the Russians There.

Today's War News Given in Summary

Grodno, last of the great fortresses in Poland held by the Russians, now seemed to be the objective of a German drive. Berlin today reports the capture by storm of the town of Lipsk, about 20 miles to the west of the fortress, the Russians being compelled to surrender.

Gen. von Eichhorn has defeated the Russians in a battle east of the Nieman, northeast of the fortress of Olita, recently taken by the Germans, capturing 1,600 prisoners and seven cannon, the German official statement announces. The defeat by Field Marshal von Mackensen's troops of Russian forces which made a stand south of Kobrin while retreating in the marshy districts east of Brest-Litovsk, is reported.

German trenches at several points in the Argonne region were seriously damaged late on Sunday by the explosion of mines and the pounding of the French artillery according to today's official report.

The sinking of the British steamer William Stephenson of Newcastle, a 1,500 ton vessel presumably after having been torpedoed by a German submarine, is reported from London.

Berlin, Aug. 30.—German forces have made a further advance on the Russian fortress of Grodno, the only one of their fortified positions near the German border which still remains in their possession.

Official announcement was made here today of the capture by storm of Lipsk in northern Russian Poland, about 20 miles to the west of Grodno. The statement follows:

"There are no special incidents to report from the western theater of war.

Eastern Theater of War.

"Army group of Field Marshal von Hindenburg:—The troops of Gen. von Beseler are stationed in the region surrounding the bridgehead south of Friedrichstadt. In the Nieman the army of Gen. von Eichhorn reached a point northeast of Olita: An additional 1,600 prisoners and seven cannon were captured. In the direction of Grodno the town of Lipsk, on the Bohr river, was taken by storm and the enemy forced to surrender. The eastern border of the forest directly east of Bialystok has been reached at several points.

WILL SOON CALL A PEACE CONVENTION

Washington, Aug. 30.—Villa and Zapata, agents here, said today that a peace convention soon would be called in neutralized territory in Mexico, to set up a provisional government. Independent Mexicans yet unaffiliated with either factions would take part, they said, and it was possible the Pan-American conferees would be asked to arrange the details. The Villa and Zapata adherents announce their intention of proceeding without Carranza, if necessary.

BRYAN HERE FOR AN HOUR

Former Cabinet Premier in Fort Wayne En Route to Hillsdale.

FINDS SENTIMENT IS ALL FOR PEACE

Refuses to Comment on Renomination of President Wilson.

William J. Bryan, ex-secretary of state, spent an hour in Fort Wayne, Monday morning, coming to this city by automobile from Winona Lake, where he spoke Sunday, and leaving at 11:30 o'clock over the Lake Shore for Hillsdale, Mich., where he was scheduled to speak Monday evening. He had lunch at the Anthony hotel before taking his departure.

Mr. Bryan said he was devoting his time in the interest of his peace propaganda and that he was never more hopeful than at the present time that this country would settle all the pending differences with the belligerent countries amicably. He declared that the prevailing sentiment throughout the country is for peace.

At the present time Mr. Bryan is making a Chautauqua tour at the conclusion of which he expects to continue his efforts for peace and for strict neu-

MANY POINTS REPORT DAMAGE FROM FROST

Washington, Aug. 30.—Abnormally low temperatures prevailed today over the upper Mississippi and lower Missouri river valleys and the upper lakes regions. In some places the weather bureau reported today the thermometer showed temperatures which made records for the month of August. Frosts were reported in many places. In some instances they were heavy and caused considerable damage to crops. Over almost all of the sections mentioned temperatures were from 10 to 23 degrees below the seasonal average. The cold came down from the Canadian northwest and will spread tonight eastward reaching the Atlantic states tomorrow. Frost was predicted as probable tonight in Michigan and northern and central Indiana and Ohio.

ONE CHARGE AGAINST GIBSON STRICKEN OFF

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 30.—Henry H. Hornbrook, who was selected as special judge in the James H. (Bud) Gibson case, involving an indictment charging violation of the primary law in the Eighth precinct of the Third ward, May 5, 1914, today sustained a motion to noll prosse the indictment.

The motion was made by Alvah J. Rucker, prosecuting attorney, who announced last week, when Gibson entered a plea of guilty to the conspiracy charge, that such action would be taken.

The indictment as to Frederick H. Cochran, who was indicted with Gibson, still stands. Gibson and Cochran were clerks in the Eighth precinct of the Third ward at the primary election.

Concessions in Enforcement of British Order in Council.

AMERICAN TRADE WILL BE GAINER

Wilson Abandons Vacation Until the Diplomatic Skies Clear.

Washington, Aug. 30.—Concessions in the enforcement against American commerce of the British order in council were announced today as a result of informal negotiations just completed by the foreign trade advisers of the state department.

The British ambassador, Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, assured the trade advisers that their informal representations in cases where the British orders have caused "undue hardships to American commerce will receive special consideration."

Before June 15 the British authorities declined to enter into informal negotiations with the trade advisers in any cases. The British note dealing with the detention of the American steamer Neches, however, on July 31, set forth that in cases where "hardship may be inflicted on citizens of neutral countries" the British government would examine the facts in a "spirit of consideration for the interests of neutrals."

NORMAN DASCOMB DIES SUDDENLY AT TOLEDO

Norman Dascomb, until a month ago a resident of Fort Wayne but recently of Toledo, died at the St. Vincent's hospital in that city Monday morning at 12:15 o'clock following an illness of but two days' duration. Saturday evening he took sick with a high fever and his grandfather, T. A. Wilkinson, of Rivermet avenue, with whom he made his home, was notified and he went to his grandson's bedside. The telegram announcing his death was received Monday morning.

The deceased was 22 years of age and was born and reared in Fort Wayne, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Dascomb. He left Fort Wayne a month ago and later secured a position with a Toledo automobile concern. The mother is now employed in a state institution at Faribault, Minn.

The body will arrive in Fort Wayne at 7:30 o'clock Monday evening via the Wabash railroad. Arrangements for the funeral will be made at that time.

Billy Sunday Talks to Bowser Employes

"Billy" Sunday made a plea for men—Christian men—before 2,500 people at the plant of the S. F. Bowser & Co., Monday afternoon.

"Be a man, not a mute, a mollycoddle, a false alarm or excess baggage," he pleaded.

Mr. and Mrs. Loren G. Jones, who were here during the Lyon evangelistic campaign last winter, were present and assisted in the music.

The famous evangelist spoke from the text: "Be Strong and Show Yourself a Man." He said that God thought more of making man than He did in making the earth because he devoted more chapters in the Bible to telling of it.

"The Lord is no respecter of persons but he is a respecter of character," Sunday continued. "You can no more hide character than fire in gun powder or gasoline. A fool may look as though he has character, but when he opens his mouth it's all off."

Christian Men Needed.

Sunday made an earnest plea for better men—men who can do something worth while and who will take a stand for the right at any cost. "A dead fish will drift with the tide, but it takes a live one to go against it," he said. He declared that God is calling loudly for valiant, Christian men.

Rev. Sunday was introduced by S. F. Bowser. The evangelist was given a tremendous ovation as he arose to speak, and it was some little time before he could proceed.

"I told Bowser I'd speak to his employes, but I think he has run in a lot of 'ringers,'" he said glancing over the audience. He said that everywhere he goes he is reminded of Fort Wayne, by the products that are manufactured here and which are world famed. He referred to the Wayne knit hose, electrical goods made at the plants of the Fort Wayne Electric works and General Electric and of the famous Bowser tank.

One of the big features of the meeting was a duet by Mr. Jones and Patrolman Frank Wilmoth, who was converted during the Lyon meeting.

Announcement was made by Mr. Bowser that he had arranged for three more meetings this year.

ALL WEARING TAGS OF IDENTIFICATION

French Liner's Passengers Labeled in Event of Submarine Attack.

New York, Aug. 30.—Passengers arriving here today aboard the steamer Espagne from Bordeau wore identification tags issued to them before sailing so that they might be identified in case German submarines should send their ship to the bottom while they were passing through the war zone. It was the first time that such tags had been worn by passengers aboard a liner reaching here from Europe since the war began.

To escape submarines the Espagne sailed at 2 o'clock in the morning shortly after the sinking of the Arabic had become known. Her officers and passengers were apprehensive of their own fate and to make identification possible in case of disaster the company listed their names and gave each person a tag to be worn on the way across. The trip however was without special incident.

Among the passengers was Dr. C. Burns Craig of the New York Neurological institute, who had been ten months in Paris studying the effect of constant firing on the nerves of soldiers. Dr. Craig said that the whine of rifle bullets was apparently not harmful to the nervous systems of the men in the trenches as they soon became accustomed to it, but that the crashing of big guns had a very serious effect as the sound shattered the nerves and made some men insane.

AERONAUT KILLED IN FALL OF 225 FEET

George Williams Meets His Death at Farmers' Picnic Saturday.

In attempting to avoid alighting in some trees Saturday evening, George Williams, twenty-one years old, an aeronaut residing at 1910 Pine street, fell to his death while making an ascension at the annual picnic of the Sheldon Farmers' Equity exchange, two miles north and half a mile east of Sheldon.

Williams had escended into the air for a distance of about 5,000 feet and was making the descent in his parachute when the accident occurred. He was about 225 feet from the ground when the wind blew him across a grove of trees. Robert Williams, a brother, who was following him across the fields, yelled to him to avoid the trees. He answered that he would and immediately unstrapped himself and hanging on with his hands started to swing. His brother believes that he swung too far, losing his hold on the handle bars. His brother was the first to reach him. He was still breathing, but only lived a few minutes. His neck had been broken.

Williams was an experienced aeronaut and had made a number of ascensions. The ascension Saturday was witnessed by about 1,000 spectators. The balloon was the property of William Crowl.

The deceased had been a resident of Fort Wayne for the past two years, coming here with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Simon Williams, from Eaton, Ind. He was employed as punch hand at the Fort Wayne Electric works. Williams is survived by his parents, six brothers and one sister, all living in Fort Wayne with the exception of one.

The body was taken to the residence on Pine street Monday afternoon where friends may view it. No services will be held but the body will be shipped to Glenwood Wednesday morning at 7 o'clock and services held at that place.

KIL-SO-QUAH'S DEATH IS BELIEVED NEAR

Roanoke, Ind., Aug. 30.—Kil-So-Quah, the aged Indian princess and last of the royal line of the Miami nation, is believed to be near death at her home a short distance from here. She was in a state of delirium Saturday night and Sunday and is reported to be sinking rapidly. But so long has she lived—105 years—with rheumatism and infirmities of age combining against her in recent years, that no one would venture to say she has only a few hours to live. For hours she talked and laughed, but speaking only in the Miami tongue, there was none but her son, Anthony Revarre, to understand her and he has not translated any of the talk during delirium. No doubt if her utterances could be written down they would make a deeply interesting bit of biography of the aged Indian princess, especially if her mind goes back to the early days of her life, to the great Chief Little Turtle, her grandfather, on whose knee she often sat, and to the many phases of Indian life she must remember.

NEXT SATURDAY'S SENTINEL

HIT RUSS IN LAST CORNER OF GALICIA

Big German Drive in West Expected to Follow Completion of Effort Against Czar.

London, Aug. 30.—Reports from the eastern front indicating that the Austrians and Germans are engaged in an effort to clear the last corner of Galicia still held by their opponents, have excited great interest here. The Russian lines on the upper Bug and the Zlota Lipa have been pierced, but it is not yet clear how serious a resistance is being offered to the vast enveloping movement from the south.

Having lost Brest-Litovsk, Grand Duke Nicholas cannot afford to hold the river positions in the south in the face of an important movement for to do so would endanger his armies. The opinion is ventured by some English critics that this latest move may conclude for the present the great offensive effort against the Russians which has been in progress since May and that once Austrian soil is cleared of the invaders a new campaign may be undertaken by the Teutonic forces, this time in the near east. In support of this theory is cited the report that the central powers are massing troops near the Rumanian border.

The week-end witnessed violent and almost continuous activity on the part of the artillery of the allies all the way from the North Sea to the Vosges. There are no indications, however, that this expenditure of big gun munitions is being followed by infantry attacks.

London is again awaiting official reports from the British or French authorities concerning the campaign at the Dardanelles where according to Constantinople, heavy fighting is under way.

CRASH OF ARTILLERY.

Big Gun Fire is Violent Along West Front Sunday.

Paris, Aug. 30.—Violent artillery fighting took place yesterday evening at many points in the Argonne district, as a result of which the trenches of the Germans were seriously damaged, according to the French official report this afternoon.

The text of the communication follows:

"Yesterday evening saw severe artillery fighting accompanied by the explosion of mines and engagements with bombs and hand grenades, at a large number of positions in the Argonne. The trenches of the enemy were seriously damaged at Courtes Chaussees, Meurissons and at Bolante.

"The advent of night brought relative quiet to this region, as well as on the rest of the front."

WIN 8-HOUR DAY FIGHT

Hundreds of Bridgeport Factory Workers Go Back to Tasks.

SHORTER HOURS AT SAME WAGES

But Alleged Grievance at Remington Arms Plant is Unsettled.

Bridgeport, Conn., Aug. 30.—Many hundreds of factory workers who had been on strike recently returned to their accustomed tasks today, their difference with employer over hours and compensation having been adjusted. In nearly every instance the workers have entered upon the eight-hour schedule, without a reduction in wages. The largest delegation of returning employes was that of upwards of 800 at the Crown and the George C. Batchellor corset companies.

At a meeting of employes of the Alt's Textile company, where 1,500 are out and the plant is closed for two weeks, announcement was made today that work for 150 weavers and slashers can be obtained elsewhere. No one signified a willingness to leave the city. The strikers are confident of winning a shorter workday and changes in the shop system.

A conference will begin today to discuss the question of ordering a general strike against the Remington Arms and Ammunition company because of alleged discrimination against workers in one trade and the discharge of four men who served on a shop committee. The conference will include T. M. Daley, national president of the Metal Polishers, Buffers, Platers, Brass and Silver Workers of North America; W. H. Johnston, national president of the Machinists; John Hines, national president of the Sheet Metal Workers' union, and officers of other unions who have been active here recently.

Plans for the campaign for an eight-hour day to be opened in New Haven this week and later at Waterbury and Hartford will be considered.

The alleged grievances at the Remington plant relate to the polishers who claim they were promised an advance in wages. They formerly received $1 per hundred for polishing bayonets and gun barrels, but claim that when the eight-hour schedule was adopted their wages dropped to 80 cents per hundred.

Four men refused to accept the new scale and when they protested they were discharged. The union in appealing for assistance asked that all the metal workers in the plant be called out.

The number of plants at which there are strikes today number thirteen.

RESERVE SCOUT FLEET.

Chicago Yachtsmen Want Power Boats on Lakes Organized.

Chicago, Aug. 30.—Mayor William Hale Thompson and Commodore James A. Pugh, of the Chicago Yacht club, will soon leave for Washington to lay before the federal government a plan to organize the power boats on the Great Lakes and elsewhere into a reserve scout fleet for volunteer service at the call of the nation, it was announced today. The plan contemplates that officers and crews, estimated to total 300,000 men, are to be trained in the use of rapid-fire guns, torpedo tubts, wireless and other signaling equipment. A government submarine for Chicago waters for practice with the local fleet of 200 power boats will be urged.

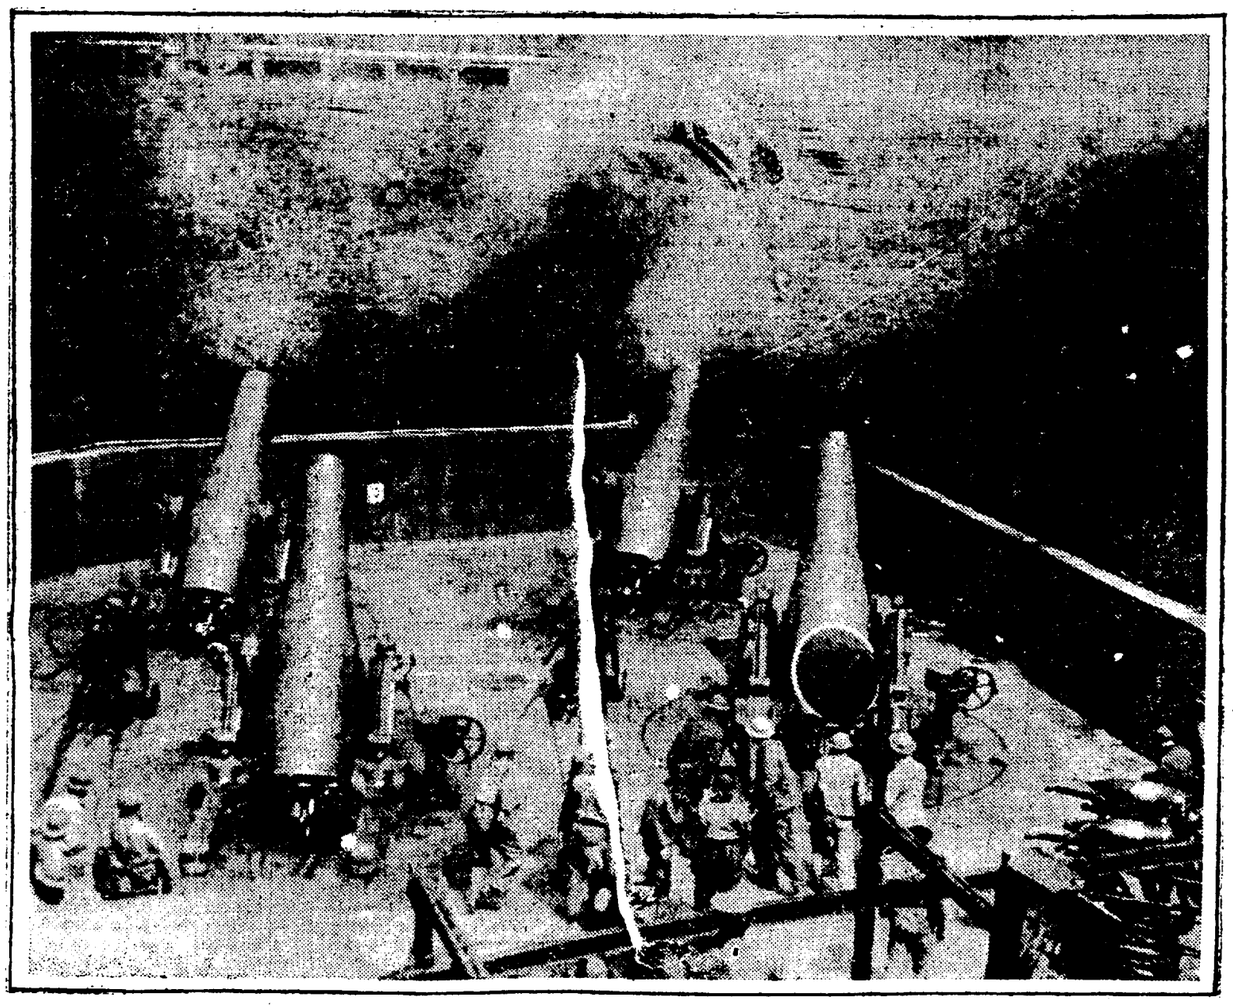
"THE STORE THAT DOES THINGS"

WHAT THESE COAST DEFENSE GUNS CAN DO PROVIDED THE ENEMY IS FOOLISH ENOUGH TO GET WITHIN SEVEN MILES.



These squat, black-mouthed guns (12-inch mortars) at Fort Totten, L. I., were tried out against an "enemy" ship (canvas target.) The officers in charge say their 1,000-pound projectiles would have sunk an invading battleship if she had been where the target was. As the target was stationed seven miles from the guns, and all foreign dreadnaughts have guns shooting much farther, the battleship of the invader "should worry" about seven-mile guns! Shooting these guns off 18 times cost Uncle Sam $1,400.

HAS CONFESSED TO $500,000 SWINDLE

Dual Life of Arkansas City Banker Disclosed by His Arrest.

St. Louis, Aug. 30.—After maintaining for years a dual identity of banker and prominent citizen of Forest City, Ark., and an alleged forger of realty documents in other parts of the country, John W. Kline, of St. Louis, was under arrest here today. He has confessed, according to the detectives, to swindling for more than $500,000.

As a bank director in Arkansas City Kline was known as John W. Barnhardt. He had been urged to become a candidate for the state senate. His family were socially prominent. Kline was arrested here last night. He had escaped jail two weeks ago, the police said, from Waukesha, Wis., where his methods in attempting to mortgage property brought him under suspicion.

The hundreds of complaints against Kline charging that he went into a rich farming community, inquired for a good farm which he might buy and get acquainted with men of money. When he had selected a farm, it was charged, he either borrowed the deed and made out a bogus deed to himself or he bought the farm, paid for it by check and took possession of the deed. As soon as the deed was safely recorded in his name Kline, his accusers say, mortgaged it and by the time the check was returned marked "no funds" he had gone back to Arkansas to become a banker again. The police say Kline is worth more than $350,000.

FORTY-TWO TONS OF ENGLISH GOLD HERE

New York, Aug. 30.—Forty-two tons of gold, worth nearly $20,000,000, and securities valued close to $25,000,000, were in the vaults of the United States sub-treasury today to help pay for Great Britain's huge purchases of war munitions. The gold and securities arrived yesterday from London, via Halifax, consigned to J. P. Morgan & Co., purchasing agent for the British government. The gold was American coin, which had been shipped to England in years of trade indebtedness by this country to England and the securities were all American issues.

This shipment, it is estimated, brings the grand total of gold and collateral sent here by and through Canada to $172,000,000 since the beginning of the war. During the said period, however, about $90,000,000 was sent from New York to the account of the bank of England at Ottawa, but this was in the early months of the war, before the trade balance shifted to this side of the Atlantic.

Cashier H. C. Miller resumed work at the Wabash freight office this morning after a vacation.

NOBLE CLOSES DEAL FOR NINDE BUILDING

Negotiations are being completed this week whereby William K. Noble will purchase the old Ninde building at the northwest corner of Berry and Harrison streets from Charles Goodman for a consideration said to be in the neighborhood of $90,000. The property is one of the oldest business corners in the heart of the city. The building fronts fifty feet on Berry street and 150 feet on Harrison street.

COPS MUST ATTEND COLLEGE.

New Requirements of Policemen in California City.

Berkeley, Cal., Aug. 30.—Policemen of Berkeley are required to attend the University of California, it was announced today. This, it is believed, was the first time any city in the world has made preparations to have a "college bred police department."

The course of study is in the relation of mental disease to criminology.

The theory is that the policemen will be enabled to "size up" a man arrested for a crime and ascertain just what other crimes he might have committed.

Besides the wife he is survived by three daughters—Mrs. John Hall, of Ossian; Mrs. Mary Whitman and Mrs. Ray Ditton, of this city.

5c St. Car Fare Round Trip for Boys and Girls on Romp Day

Manager Greenland, of the Traction company, has granted a 5-cent street car fare for the round trip for all boys and girls from any part of Fort Wayne with transfers going home. There is not a boy or girl in the city, therefore that cannot go to Robison Park on Romp Day. A sandwich and a nickel in your pocket is all that is necessary. So skirmish around and earn the nickel some way. Ask Aunt Mary or Uncle John or the neighbor who has no boy or girl if you can do something for them. Tell them all about Romp Day, about the big candy treat and the big day of fun at Robison Park. Say that you want to go so badly, then ask them to go along with you.

ALL WILL RECOVER.

No Fatalities Will Result From Accident Near Bluffton.

Bluffton, Ind., Aug. 30.—All the persons injured Saturday evening when a north bound C. B. & C. gaso-electric car hit an automobile at Bracey, will recover, was the statement given out by the physician last night. Two of the six occupants were not injured. They were Perry Weigle of Kokomo, and Harry Johnson, son of Mrs. Nellie Johnson.

The injured were:

Mrs. Nellie Johnson, of Travisville—Concussion of the brain, and in a serious condition.

David Johnson of Travisville—Nose broken and back bruised.

Mrs. David Johnson—One rib on left side broken, and severe bruises.

Mrs. Perry Weigle—Bruised bandly and suffering from operation for gall stones, from which she had not fully recovered.

Internal injuries were feared for a time, but this danger is thought to have passed. Mrs. Weigle was not fully conscious last night, and has not been since the accident.

The C. B. & C. car was running about eighteen miles an hour, according to F. C. Smith, of Huntington, the motorman. He estimated that the automobile was traveling east on the road at thirty miles an hour. The driver could not see the on coming car until almost on the tracks, a cornfield in the southeast corner of the crossing obstructing the view.

Mr. Krider was born in Stark county, O., July 2, 1843, and was the son of Jeremiah Krider and wife. At the age of two years they came to Indiana and settled down in Smith township where the deceased had been a lifelong resident. Death came at the age of 72 years, 1 month and 26 days. This is one of the largest oats yields reported in this county for some years and Mr. Trumbull has reason to be proud of his crop. From the fifteen acres he harvested 1,218 bushels. Ray Vance who lives on the Henry Reece farm in Washington township, threshed 1,801 bushels from thirty acres of land or an average of sixty bushels to the acre. On the ten acres first threshed he had an average of seventy-four bushels to the acre.

Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

Few medicines have met with more favor or accomplished more good than Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. From a small beginning its sale and use has extended to all parts of the United States and to many foreign countries. Everywhere it has received unstinted praise. We confidently believe that it has relieved more pain and suffering and saved the lives of more people than any other one preparation in use. One or two doses of it is enough to relieve an ordinary attack of colic and diarrhoea. It ras been used in many epidemics of dysentery with perfect success. It is especially valuable for summer diarrhoeas in children. Every family should keep it at hand as attacks of cholera morbus often result fatally before medicine can be procured or a physician summoned. Obtainable everywhere.—Adv.

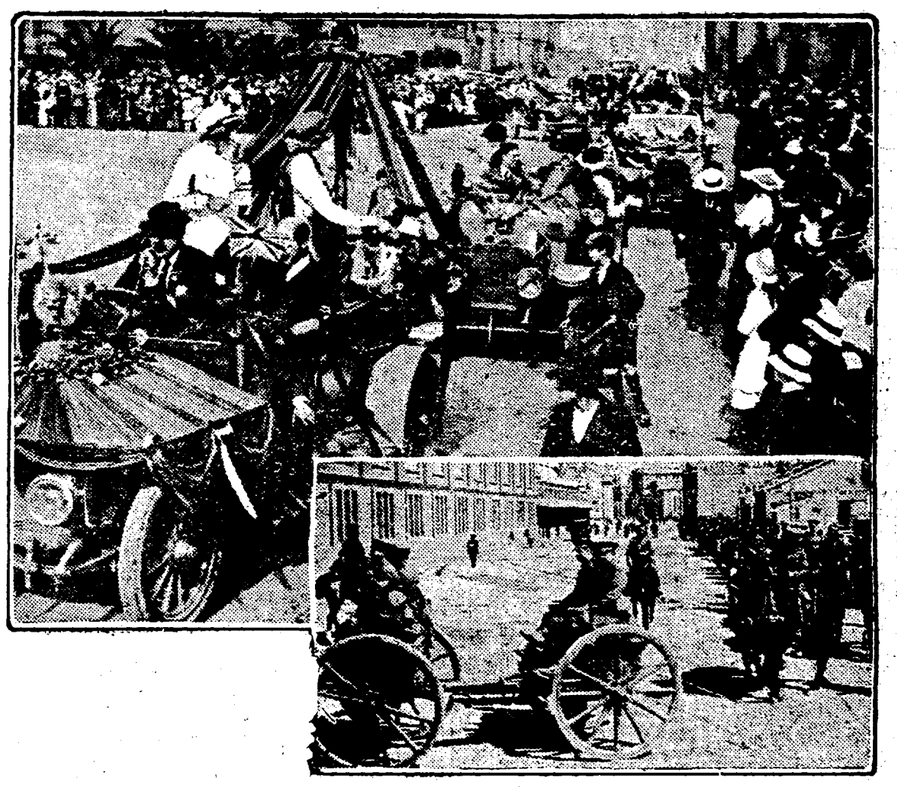
WAR HAS BECOME POOR MAN'S BURDEN IN AUSTRALIA.



(BY ADELE HOWELLS.)

Sydney, Australia, Aug. 30.—The war has become the poor man's burden in Australia. Of the several hundred recruits daily required to reinforce the troops at the Dardanelles and in France, the majority come from the poorer classes.

Fathers and mothers are sacrificing everything to send their sons to the front.

Wives are cutting down expenses to practically nothing so as to fit their husbands can fight for king and country.

The clothes required by the soldiers are a heavy load for poor parents, in spite of the money which the soldiers receive as wages and the assistance given by the Red Cross society. The present rise in foodstuffs and materials for wearing apparel may prove to be the straw that breaks the camel's back.

Eggs, butter and sugar have more than doubled in price. In Sydney, only three pounds of sugar for each person is allowed to be sold at one time. Butter is often absent from the tables on account of the shortage. The poor man has returned to the USE OF BEEF DRIPPINGS ON HIS BREAD. Wool has also doubled in price. Knitting wool for socks and balaclavers has become very scarce and is often unobtainable for weeks.

The poor man, as well as the rich man, is pouring his money into the coffers that supply the war funds. Clerks, carriers, laborers, cooks, butlers, housemaids and all kinds of servants are adding their "mite" to the cause and trying to make the way easier for the dear ones at the front. They contribute to the thousands of war benefits throughout the country. They give freely their hard-earned pennies for the wounded, the sick and for the Belgians. Nearly everyone has some one to look out for.

Although recruiting is going on with astonishing rapidity, the police have taken the names of every unmarried man between the ages of 18 and 60 in the country. The next list will contain the names of the young married men. This measure is looked upon as the forerunner of conscription. The enlistment requirements have been lowered. Men are now accepted between the ages of 18 and 45, minimum heigh, 5 feet 3 inches, with chest measurements of 33 inches. The rates of pay per day are: For lieutenants, about $5; for sergenats, $2.50; corporals, $2.25; privates, $1.50. Married members receive in addition a separation allowance for wife living at home of about 25 cents a day; for each child under 10, 12 cents per day; for a mother who is dependent for support, 35 cents per day.

Romp Day!

One more day of romp and frolic,
One more day at Robison park;
One more day of merry-making,
Happy as a meadow lark.

Hear the children's merry laughter,
See their happy blissful smiles;
Turning earth into a heaven,
Making life to all worth while.

Boys you'll see with looks so earnest,
While others wear a great big grin;
Happy for a rare occasion,
That a trophy they might win.

Girls whose faces are all sunshine,
Happy since they are not grown;
Pleased that they are little children,
'Tis the happiest time they've known.

Could we but forget the milestones
We have passed along our way,
And again be little children,
Romp and frolic for one day.

There is one who'll live forever,
As the children's patron saint,
Who established blissful "Romp Day,"
Nothing will his memory taint.

Let us all be little children,
And enjoy their mirth and glee;
Let us help them in their frolics,
Better children they will be.

'Tis the day that childish laughter
Fills the park with heavenly bliss;
Purity is stamped upon you
By a child's caress or kiss.

THE SENTINEL'S DAILY SCRIPTURE READING.

Mark II 1:1-17.

1 And when they came nigh to Jerusalem, unto Bethphage and Bethany, at the mount of Olives, he sendeth forth two of his disciples,

2 And saith unto them, Go your way into the village over against you: and as soon as ye be entered into it, ye shall find a colt tied, whereon never man sat; loose him and bring him.

3 And if any man say unto you, Why do ye do this? say ye that the Lord hath need of him; and straightway he will send him hither.

4 And they went their way, and found the colt tied by the door without in a place where two ways met; and they loose him.

5 And certain of them that stood there said unto them, Why do ye, loosing the colt?

6 And they said unto them even as Jesus had commanded: and they let them go.

7 And they brought the colt to Jesus, and cast their garments on him: and he sat upon him.

8 And many spread their garments in the way; and others cut down branches off the trees, and strewed them in the way.

9 And they that went before, and that followed, cried, saying, Hosanna; Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord:

10 Blessed be the kingdom of our father David, that cometh in the name of the Lord: Hosanna in the highest.

11 And Jesus entered into Jerusalem, and into the temple: and when he had looked round about upon all things, and now the eventide was come, he went out unto Bethany with the twelve.

12 And on the morrow, when they were come from Bethany, he was hungry:

13 And seeing a fig tree afar off having leaves, he came, if haply he might find any thing thereon: and when he came to it, he found nothing but leaves; for the time of figs was not yet.

14 And Jesus answered and said unto it, No man eat fruit of thee hereafter for ever. And his disciples heard it.

15 And they came to Jerusalem: and Jesus went into the temple, and began to cast out them that bought and sold in the temple, and overthrew the tables of the money changers, and the seats of them that sold doves;

16 And would not suffer that any man should carry any vessel through the temple.

17 And he taught, saying unto them, It is not written, My house shall be called of all nations the house of prayer? but ye have made it a den of thieves.

The Town Exposition

Fall festivals, chautauquas and expositions of various sorts have come to be almost yearly events in many Indiana cities and towns, and their number is steadily increasing. They mark a certain transition from the original fair idea and have doubtless gained much of their popularity from the fact that they may be enjoyed by many small centers in which the organization and operation of a successful agricultural fair would be clearly impossible.

It has remained for Kokomo, however, to take an advanced step by arranging to make its exposition a permanent affair. Two permanent buildings are to be erected at the exposition grounds in that city, and the function—a purely Kokomo exposition—will become a fixed annual event for the city. It will be a function in which all the people of the city are to have a part, and stimulated by the civic pride that is certain to be awakened it can become a pretentious affair with much resultant good to Kokomo. The idea is an excellent one.

The desirability of the average street fair or carnival with imported attractions is always questionable. It is designed to take from the city more than it brings, and there is never resultant benefit to the city which encourages it. No such state of affairs obtains with the home exposition, designed to show creative ability, civic attractiveness and municipal excellence. The value of such enterprises, for instance, as the made-in-Fort Wayne exposition staged here a few years ago can hardly be estimated. It is wholesome and it is clean. It could well stand repetition each year and furnish a most interesting and profitable illustration of what the city is able to do. Something of that sort, we take it, is planned by Kokomo, and the decision to make the exposition a permanent one is still more important. Kokomo is setting an example which might well be followed by other Indiana cities.

Five thousand people homeless as a result of flood along the Arkansas river country ought to mean something to the Fort Wayne citizen who has not yet signed the flood prevention petitions, even with the likelihood of extensive damage rather more remote here than there. The local demonstrations in the spring of 1913 should be accepted as an impressive indication that one never can tell. With an opportunity to safeguard the city against a possible repetition of that inundation, it will amount to almost criminal negligence if we fail to take advantage of it.

The law enforcement and reform league of the Indiana brewers has filed complaints at Indianapolis asking the revocation of the licenses of six saloon men in that city whom it declares are habitual violators of the Sunday closing law. Six isn't many out of the myriad of supposed violators of the liquor laws at Indianapolis, it is true, but it is apparently half a dozen more than the police were able to find, and the discovery must come as a distressing sort of shock to the men who are not only sworn to enforce the law but are making their living drawing pay for doing it.

The third death has just occurred at Valparaiso from poisoning because a mistake was made in serving toadstools for mushrooms to a party of campers five weeks ago. It is becoming increasingly apparent that a good many people who profess to be skilled experts in identifying the harmless variety of fungi ought to be required to undergo a state examination, be placed under heavy bond—and then prohibited from operating at all in order to guard against possibly fatal errors.

Gary's first pest house was stolen and converted into a boarding house, the second was blown up, and the third carried away piecemeal, and the fourth has just been burned by tramps. Almost any community save Gary would begin to be discouraged over the attempt to provide modern improvements by this time, but Gary is going to try it again. The next pest house will be of reinforced concrete construction. It is clear that the word "fail" has been expurgated from all the dictionaries imported into the steel city.

Lord Balfour, of the English admiralty, is out in a statement in which he deprecates the value of the German airship raids from a military point of view, asserting that neither soldiers nor sailors have been harmed by them. It will be noted, however, that Lord Balfour refrains from recommending them as a nerve sedative in these high tension times.

FRIENDLESS BARLEYCORN.

(Kansas City Star.)

Poor old John Barleycorn.

One by one his laurels are falling from him, his friends slipping away—the friends who used to give him their hard earned money just to be in his presence.

Not long ago he was a jolly good fellow. When he entered cares were cast aside, worries forgotten and the world became rosy. Men of prominence in the world's affairs slapped him on the back, called him a good friend and honored him with golden words of poetry.

But John played a losing game—one bound to beat him in the end. Toasts of "Tonight" were drunk with rousing cheers, forgetful of the "tomorrow." But the "tomorrows" came with relentless persistency—and with them came the disillusionment. Employers learned to know the "hangover" look or they were not long employers. Employes learned this, and, bowing to efficiency, quit John.

So now, almost deserted, John slinks in the back door with clothing bedraggled, to drink himself into forgetfulness. One by one his pet sayings have succumbed to the sane light of reason. Pictures are painted with steadier hands, and poems sung with clearer reason.

"I can drink today and let it alone tomorrow," said one of John's friends. But that friend is dead.

"My boss drinks, so why shouldn't I drink?" asked another friend. But that friend has lost his job. The boss went broke.

"You can't hurt a drunk man," said another, and he fell down a flight of stone steps, got up and reeled toward home. But one the way home he misjudged the speed of a motor car and was killed.

So, almost friendless and alone, John Barleycorn slinks in the back door and drinks to drown the thought of the tomorrow.

Poor John Barleycorn.

BIG TIME ENJOYED AT MOOSE PICNIC

The annual picnic of the members of the Moose lodge at Radert grove, four miles northeast of the city, Sunday, was a grand success in every particular with something "doing" every minute of the day. Of course, the big chicken dinner at noon was the principal feature of the day's festivities, several hundred chickens being used for the occasion. There was no special program, but plenty of amusement was provided for everybody.

Veterans' Day at Robison Park

Labor Day at Robison Park will be Veterans' Day. The veterans of the civil war, the Woman's Relief corps and the Ladies of the G. A. R. will be the special guests. These heroes of ours will march as in the days of old. Their weapons will not be those of war, however, but the flag for which they fought and bled. It will be an inspiring sight to see these Boys in Blue marching again. It will awaken our patriotism. It will cause our hearts to swell with pride. It will enlarge our appreciation of the wonderful heritage they have bestowed upon us. The veterans are our heroes. They fought for us. They sacrificed for us. They willingly gave up all that life holds most dear that Old Glory might live and continue to wave over an united people. They are growing old. Soon they shall have passed on into the Great Beyond. Labor Day shall be their day at Robison Park. We will stand with uncovered heads as they pass by. We will lift up our voices and cheer that they may know how much we appreciate them.

"They are camping near the sunset;
the shadows are growing long.
Just a step across the river, be brave—
my boys—be strong.
Each day the muffled drum and the silent funeral tread
Reminds us that a comrade is numbered with the dead."

"We'll wrap the flag around you boys,
a nation's love and pride,
Will memorize your sterling worth that
time nor death can hide.
In the city of the dead, we'll strew rare
flowers in May.
A nation's love will follow you when
Uncle Sam is old and gray."

Ten Million Women Preparing for a Mobilization of Mercy

Plan Systematic Organization for Relief Work in Event of War — New Phase of National Defense.

(By Kenneth W. Payne.)

New York Aug. 30—The mobilization of mercy! The women's preparedness for war! Ten million American women organized so efficiently for relief work in a military crisis that by merely touching a key in New York the machinery of supplying soldiers' kits, Red Cross garments, hospitals and nurses would be set swiftly in operation throughout the United States!

That is the vast plan now being worked out by a unique group of society leaders of the east, under the leadership of Mrs. William Alexander, of New York, and with the co-operation of scores of women like Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Jr., Mrs. Jay Gould, Mrs. William Rockefeller and Princess Pierre Troubetzkoy and Mrs. Franklin D. Pelton.

The tremendous scheme of the Special Relief society is to keep all the women as effectively prepared in advance for their share in the war as the army is prepared for its work. While President Wilson is silently studying out the questions of military preparedness these women are perfecting their organization for the mobilization of mercy which must co-operate with the purely military branch in war time.

The plan for this organization, mapped out by Mrs. Alexander, is to interest all the women's clubs, sewing societies, committees, etc., in the work all over the country. Every club will be asked to send in its pledge of the work it can best do, of the amount of work that can be expected of it, and of the time it will take to deliver the product.

In the main office of the society on Fifth avenue lists of these clubs will be kept carefully indexed. Addressing the women of America, Mrs. Alexander says:

"We have sample kits for the regular and volunteer soldiers of the United States, and we should like to give you details for the making of these kits. We note with concern the general condition of unpreparedness in the United States and we feel that the women of America should be doing their part in preparing for an emergency. We are therefore endeavoring to enlist the names of the women's organizations in the campaign for an adequate national defense. If our idea of preparedness meets with your approval, kindly send the name of your organization to the Special Relief society, 597 Fifth avenue, New York city."

As the lists of these names are accumulated, instructions will be sent out to the volunteers. The sewing circles will be told how best to buy their material, what work they might best undertake. The volunteer nurses will be told how to prepare for hospital service.

Should war break out, Mrs. Alexander hopes to have 10,000,000 women trained and ready instantly to fall into their particular part of the service.

MRS. WILLIAM ALEXANDER, PRESIDENT OF THE AMERICAN WOMEN'S SPECIAL RELIEF SOCIETY; AND (AT BOTTOM) MISS ELSIE DE WOLFE, AN ACTIVE MEMBER OF THE GENERAL COMMITTEE.

WITH BOTH LEGS OFF VICTIM MAY RECOVER

Frank Tobias, of Warsaw, Meets Frightful Accident in Fort Wayne.

Frank Tobias, the Warsaw resident who lost both legs as a result of falling when he attempted to get upon a Pennsylvania freight train a half-mile west of Ft. Wayne to ride to his home town, may survive the accident. He is now at St. Joseph hospital and Dr. Budd Van Sweringen, who amputated the crushed limbs, says the wounded man has a good chance to recover. One of the limbs was severed just below the hip and the other four inches below the knee.

Nobody saw the accident and Tobias laid at the side of the track some time before he was discovered by Engineer Tourgee on an eastbound train at 6:30 o'clock Saturday evening. The train was stopped, the injured man picked up and brought to the Pennsylvania station, where the police ambulance got him and took him to St. Joseph hospital. Tobias and James Hoover, the latter also of Warsaw, came here ten days ago and a day or two later were arrested for intoxication. Tobias charged Hoover with robbing his pockets of all his money and the charge against Hoover was changed from intoxication to petit larceny and he was fined $5 and costs. The intoxication charge against Tobias was continued indefinitely.

Mrs. Tobias and the children, according to the story of the injured man, have been in Michigan until recently and he was going to Warsaw to meet them. They reside at 322 Cook street, Warsaw.

THIRD DEATH FROM POISON.

Valparaiso, Ind., Aug. 30.—Thomas Heard, 55, a prominent northern Indiana lawyer, is dead at his home here as a result of eating toad stools which were mistaken for mushrooms. Mr. Heard's death is the third to result from eating the fungi served for mushrooms to a party of campers about five weeks ago. Mr. Heard was prominent in the progressive party. The medical school of Valparaiso university has invited prominent Indiana and Chicago physicians to attend a clinic at which an effort will be made to learn something of the poison which caused the death of Mr. Heard and his companions.

No. 1—Once, while in France, I heard that a big gas tank in a distant city had been struck by a shell from the enemy! The city was threatened with darkness!
No. 2—I leaped onto my concrete mixer and rode off in the direction named—a well formed plan in my head.
No. 3—Approaching the gas tank, I took up my position nearby and played a stream of cement over the leak in the roof!

Nearly two hundred descendants of the Zuber family celebrated a reunion on Sunday afternoon in St. Peter's school hall, St. Martin's street. A sumptuous dinner was enjoyed as well as other features of a splendid time. Francis Zuber, of Antwerp, Ohio, was chosen president; C. K. Zuber, Paulding county, vice president; William Zuber, Paulding county, treasurer; Joseph Dunderman, Paulding county, secretary. Rev. Charles Thiele made an address during the afternoon. The next reunion will be held in Antwerp, Ohio.

GO AHEAD AND GET A MIRROR.

AUGUSTA ANDERSON.

Los Angeles, Aug. 26.—"Arguments of the prim and prudish, notwithstanding, I say girls should learn how to use their mirror."

A wonderfully pretty girl who doesn't seem to have the slightest need of "primping up" or "touching up," to make herself presentable, made this assertion as she leaned across toward her mirror and pinned a rose at her throat.

Her name is Augusta Anderson, a girl who has forged ahead until her name is well known among the successful money-makers in the film world.

There is no harm, she advises, in a girl looking her best at all times.

"I know a woman who has at least one mirror in every room and hall of her home. She isn't a vain woman, either. But she believes that if the world, generally, especially women who are prone to screw up their faces and wrinkle their brows over trifles, would cultivate the habit of mirror-gazing, they'd break themselves of any number of grimace habits they now have.

"I'm for her idea. I believe in it, too.

"The mirror, used sensibly, is a better adjunct to beauty than the massage parlor and the beauty doctor. It is a means of prevention while the other is a problematical cure.

"All women won't agree with me, perhaps, but I think they will see the wisdom of the idea if they will take the time to study out the matter as I have done."

Miss Anderson is surely an excellent "ad." for her grimace-cure and wrinkle-banisher. Her face is as smooth as baby's and as pink and white as the proverbial peach.

AT THE MAJESTIC.

"The Lady in Red" at the Majestic Wednesday Evening.

Much is expected of the widely advertised musical success, "The Lady in Red," which comes to the Majestic Wednesday, and Manager Essig promises that none will be disappointed, and here is his argument: "I have in my possession an original program of "The Lady in Red" as it appeared for sixteen weeks at the Geo. M. Cohan Grand opera house, Chicago, and have Mr. Herndon's personal assurance that the cast, chorus and production to be seen here will be absolutely the same. Several of my friends, as well as myself, have seen it in the Windy City and claim it to be the classiest musical play of the season. How could it be otherwise, when one considers that it is interpreted by such splendid stars as Valli Valli, Glenn Hall, Edward Martindel, Gertrude Vanderbilt, Will Philips, Josie Intropidi, George Moore, Henry Vincent, Ann Herndon, George Moore, Phyllis Maude and Lucille Gardiner. While we have had a great many good shows out of Chicago, it is seldom that we get a musical production in its entirety and original form."

Next Thursday is Housewives' Potato Loaf Day.

AT THE NEW PALACE

Gary's public schools long have been the ideal towards which all other systems have struggled. The work being done in the Gary schools of which William A. Wirt is principle now, is being copied by New York's school city. This system has been reduced to movie film form and the results will be projected onto the Keith Palace screen next Wednesday afternoon and evening for the edification of Fort Wayne's public. All persons, including school boys and girls, their parents and all other good citizens will find a wealth of interest in these remarkable films, which were exhibited and won the silver medal at the Panama-Pacific exposition. Samuel J. Brickley, principle of the Froebel school at Gary and for many years associated with Mr. Wirt in his work, will deliver a descriptive lecture in connection with these pictures.

AT THE JEFFERSON.

FUNNY SAM BERNARD.

America's Premier Comedian at Jefferson in "Poor Schmaltz."

Mr. Bernard, world-famous as the greatest character comedian of the day, was engaged by the Famous Players Film company in response to numerous requests from exhibitors throughout the country.

"Poor Schmaltz" is the surest remedy and preventative for grouch, mental weariness and the belief that there are not any more really interesting comedies.

On the morrow and Wednesday George Fawcett, the eminent American character actor, will be seen with a stellar cast of Paramount favorites in "The Majesty of the Law."

AT THE ORPHEUM.

A VERY IMPORTANT CHANGE.

Orpheum Theater Will Revise Admission Scale and Show Big Features.

Showing "The Vampire" with the eminent emotional actress, Olga Petrova, in the titular role as the opening attraction, the Orpheum theater tomorrow emphasizes a change of policy, made necessary by the incessant demands of patrons, who have long importuned the management to show only feature films. The projection of photoplays possessing the superlative points of "The Vampire," and others of like kind, to musical accompaniments furnished by the Orpheum orchestra, means a combination that is incomparably good.

The appearance of Mme. Petrova, the noted emotional actress, in the creative title role of "The Vampire," as a first day attraction on the Orpheum screen, is one that could not possibly have been improved upon. "The Vampire" is produced by the celebrated Metro corporation, and tells in five startling acts of the career of a seductively beautiful woman, who—embittered at all mankind through the loss of an early love, goes through life luring men to their destruction, and then deserting them, to laugh and mock as they frantically try to regain their former firm foothold on life.

On Thursday and Friday Irene Fenwick, the young actress who scored such a sensational triumph in "The Song of Songs," will be seen in a magnificent picturization of Porter Emerson Browne's "The Spendthrift."

Miss Edith Foster, teacher of Piano and Harmony, announces the opening of her studio for the winter season, 1915-1916. Rooms 215-216 Schmitz Block. Phone 3700.

"PAJAMA GIRL" STILL IN DAME FASHION'S FAVOR.

By Betty Brown.

Almost every girl is a "Pajama Girl" these days, for the girls, especially the younger girls, have found out how comfortable are the bifurcated garments and they're wearing them almost to the exclusion of the frilly and beribboned night robes. There's very little chance for ornamentation on the prim little pajamas, but this season some very pretty ones have been brought out in cotton crepe and in flowered mercerized cotton. The pretty pajamas in which Miss Ruth Cotton of the Heisen Follies de Vogue posed for this picture are made of soft Japanese crepe in old blue with cuffs of Japanese silk. The "frog" and buttons are of white silk.

ASPHYXIATED BY GAS IN BUSINESS PLACE

Lewis Shatzer, Formerly of Fort Wayne, Found Dead at Wabash.

Lewis Schatzer, owner and manager of the Wabash Produce company, at Wabash, Ind., and formerly a well known resident of Fort Wayne, was found dead Saturday in the banana room of his place of business. Death was due to asphyxiation, as the little gas heater which was used to furnish heat so that the fruit would ripen quickly, was found unlighted and turned on in full force. Whether death was accidental or whether it is suicide has not been determined.

While residing in this city Mr. Shatzer was connected with the Baum Commission company, for whom he worked for fifteen years, and while here won the friendship of his associates. He moved to Wabash six years ago and since that time has conducted his own place of business.

The deceased was a member of the First M. E. church of Wabash and was also a member of the Moose lodge of Fort Wayne. He is survived by his wife and three brothers, George, John and Andrew, and one sister, Mrs. Sarah Harding, all of Maine.

Tuesday morning at 11:15 o'clock and Tuesda ymorning at 11:15 o'clock and funeral services will be held at the First M. E. church of this city at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, Rev. D. H. Guild officiating. Interment at Lindenwood.

Young People's branch of the W. C. T. U. held a social meeting at the home of Miss Frances Houk, 2715 South Hanna street, and enjoyed one of the best programs it has ever given. One of the special features was an address given by Attorney William Ballou on the evils of the liquor traffic here and of the efforts that are being put forth to bring it to a close in this city. Several other addresses were made and a male quartet composed of Messrs. Houk, Robertson, Minse and Spice rendered several selections.

The next meeting of the society will be a business one to be held at the home of Miss Blanche Bauer, of 2133 Weisser Park avenue, on September 17. Officers for the coming year will be elected.

"Lemo' and Popcorn" Her Cry 44 Years

MRS CAROLINE JESSOP

MRS. CAROLINE JESSOP.

Her cheery disposition and kindly face have endeared her to thousands who familiarly call her "Mother Jessop" and she is justly proud of the honor.

Since 1873 we have had a style message each season for well-dressed men—a fashion announcement as authoritative in tone for men as the pronouncement of modes for women from Worth and Paquin.

It is a sincere pleasure to us to be able to announce the usual Rabus showing of improved woolens for Fall and Winter. It is gratifying to know that the connections of long standing with the foremost manufacturers abroad have not been severed by the war and that the choice and range of patterns is more exclusive even than in previous years.

The trend of style this year makes tailoring of the Rabus individuality and character a requisite. We would ask you to consider this a cordial invitation to visit our Fall display.

THE BLINDNESS OF VIRTUE.

Temple Players Present a Master Dramatic Effort.

A play worthy of all the good things that have been said about it, a play convincing, because of the truth it tells, is "The Blindness of Virtue," the dramatic sermon on sex hygiene instruction by fathers and mothers, written by Cosmo Hamilton and being produced at the Temple this week by the Temple Stock Players. Mr. Harry Manners is cast this week as the vicar whose eyes are opened to the fallacy of permitting girls and boys to discover the secrets of life through the befouled mouths of designing elders, rather than in the sanctity of the home. The vicar wakens to this when he finds his daughter's complete innocence has led her into a compromising situation. That no actual guilt attached to her name was providential, and the vicar casts aside his prudery and sends up a prayer that the mothers and fathers of the world may realize the wisdom of taking their children into a complete understanding. There will be a matinee performance Tuesday.

THE SENTINEL'S LIVE SPORTS CRISP RELIABLE

DICK SEES BLACK FUTURE FOR CENTRAL

Grand Rapids Scribe Suggests Anderson, Muncie and Saginaw.

(Dickerson in Grand Rapids Press.)

It is doubtful whether a single team owner or manager of the Central league can tell at the present time what cities will compose the 1916 circuit. There are going to be changes made and the mileage reduced so that there may be some chance of someone besides the players and the railroads profiting by the league's existence. Dayton lost money with a pennant winning team last year and Evansville did little better than break even with one this year.

There is only one way to shorten the mileage of a circuit and that is to drop those cities which are farthest from the center of the circuit. With the Central league it means that either Erie, Youngstown and Wheeling or Evansville and Terre Haute must be dropped. Of the five Terre Haute alone is reported willing to give up franchise rights.

Evansville and Terre Haute go together and without one the other could hardly be afforded by the league because of the mileage. With the two in the league the jump to Evansville is broken. Evansville is one of the best crowd-drawing towns in the league, yet is so far away from the rest of the circuit as hardly to be considered without Terre Haute in the circuit.

Youngstown, Wheeling and Erie are all good baseball towns, but it takes a lot of costly travel to reach them and the magnates of the league will soon be called upon to decide whether it is advisable to go so far east as Pennsylvania and West Virginia for cities when the nearest of the five western towns of the circuit to Erie and Wheeling is several hundred miles away. Wheeling started off drawing fine this year and would no doubt have made a good showing had the Etogies not been outclassed in the race. Back in the early days of the league Wheeling was one of the best towns.

Erie turned out fair crowds this year, yet did not warm up as it has other years. Youngstown turned out fine to the Sunday games there and none too well the other days. Wheeling, Youngstown and Erie are good baseball towns, however.

New Towns That Stand a Show.

Naturally when a league drops some towns it has to take in other towns to replace them if it does not reduce the number of its clubs. South Bend will be one of the first towns to be taken in if the circuit changes. By location and in many other ways it belongs in the Central league. Ed Smith, who has plenty of backing in South Bend, is likely to be at the head of things there next year.

If Evansville and Terre Haute drop out the place of one of them will no doubt be taken by South Bend, Marion, Anderson and Muncie in Indiana, Saginaw, Jackson and Battle Creek, in Michigan are to be considered. Muskegon also stands an excellent chance if the opening presents. If the Sawdust city can have its new downtown park in readiness for the opening of the 1916 championship season and the business men of the town are willing to go behind the team as they should the town has a chance.

The time has come when the Central must make some radical changes or fall by the wayside as many minor leagues did this year. If Terre Haute and Evansville should quit the league and their places be taken by South Bend and Muskegon it would reduce the league mileage by about one-half.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Travers Is "Crabby" While Evans Is Confident and That May Decide National Golf Title Meet

(BY BROWN HOLMES.)

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 30.—Just about all the golf champions in the United States—and nearly any golfer who is much of a golfer at all seems to hold some sort of title—are gathered here for the blue ribbon event of amateur golfdom, the national championship tournament.

Of course there are some players who stand out as the greatest of the lot, but these stars say they are in for the hardest test they have ever had. The growing ability of golfers in all parts of the country makes things harder for the leaders every year.

Old psychology is on the job good and strong. Psychology is always important in golf, for it is claimed that a golfer is just about as good as he thinks he is, but this year psychology concerns itself mostly with Jerry Travers and Chick Evans, picked with Francis Ouimet as possible winners.

Travers is usually a smiler, but he has been "crabby" ever since he came here. He has crabbed the weather and everything else and in his preliminary work he was off in his shooting.

Evans is more jovial than ever. Here is a chap who is a problem. He is just about as good as any golfer in the country, but sometimes he is beaten by dubs.

His chances depend upon what Chick Evans thinks of Chick Evans.

Golfers have always said that if Evans could convince himself that he could win the national honor he would go out and win it. But it seems that he has always regarded himself a chronic semi-finalist and he has been left in the semi-finals.

This year Evans seems to have the confidence. Probably it has been brought on by his success in various matches lately.

If Evans has finally convinced himself that he can go out and win that title and if Travers is going to remain "crabby" through the meet there is a mighty good chance that Evans will win the honor for the first time in his many trials and that Travers, present open champion and four-time amateur champion, will be trimmed.

DARSEY TO GET REAL ACID TEST

Australian Wonder to Face Some Fast Ring Men Soon.

Les Darsey, the Australian middleweight who flashed into the limelight by knocking out Eddie McGoorty in 16 rounds, is due for the test that will show just how good is his claim to the middleweight championship.

Jimmy Clabby, the Hammond, Ind., speeder, is on his way to Australia for a match with Darsey and Mike Gibbons, the St. Paul Phantom, is booked to go to Australia as soon as he has finished his $32,500 tussle with Packey McFarland.

If Darsey can hold his own against Clabby, then against Gibbons, he will be entitled to all the praise that has been handed him lately.

Larsey is touted as a punching wonder. He had to have a punch to put away Eddie McGoorty, one of the strongest men in the ring. Before that he gave Jeff Smith such a beating in five rounds, Smith fouled and was barred from the ring by Australia promoters who were of the opinion that he hit low purposely.

Darsey stacks up well for his match with Clabby. He has beaten Mickey King, who drew with Clabby.

Efforts have been made to get Darsey to come to the United States, but he has chosen to stay in Australia while he is a big favorite there. He figures to make a lot of money in bouts with Clabby and Gibbons before he gives United States fans a chance to see him in action.

BADE MYERS' BEAUTIES GRAB SUNDAY GAME

Kendallville Team Was But Aint—Score Nine and One.

Kendallville is stitting up in bed this morning, possessed of the realization that there's a difference between a crack semi-pro team and a gang of professionals. The Kendallville crew believed firmly up till Sunday that the only reason they hadn't beaten any professionals this year was that they hadn't played any.

Beyers featured the game with a homer and a steal to the plate, Hart performed well in the outfield; Mee, Osborne and Brubaker were heavy stick men, and the whole affair was decidedly one-sided.

YOST ORDERS PLAYERS TO REPORT SOON

Ann Arbor, Mich., Aug. 30.—Invitations to report for football practice were issued today by the athletic association of the University of Michigan to thirty-three players. Coach Yost has decided to again use Ferry field for the initial work, and those favored with invitations have been ordered to report there Sept. 20. Work will begin on the following day. Two or three players whose scholastic standing is at present uncertain may be invited later.

Of last year's squad Coach Yost has selected fifteen men, but three cannot hold places unless they remove scholastic conditions. Of these the most prominent is Tackle Lewis Reimann, who last year promised to become one of the country's greatest linemen. He played in every game, and is a fighting tackle of the most aggressive type.

He was relied upon to bolster up the left side of the line. Others low in their studies are Norton and Whalen, guard and end, both of whom showed flashes of form last year, but were never quite good enough to land a berth.

LINE EXTENDS OVER A THOUSAND MILES

Geographic Society Tells of Russian Defenses in Dreary Land.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 30.—Characteristics of the long tertiary line of Russian defense, to which the Muscovites may retreat in consequence of the German successes south of Courland, and which reaches from the narrows of the gulf of Finland, south, to the Roumanian Danube, are discussed in the last bulletin issued by the National Geographic society. Roughly estimated, this line extends more than a thousand miles crossing plains, lake country, rolling hills, impassable swamps, and through dense forest belts. Almost throughout its whole extent winter is bitter and rigorous. With the German armies able to force the abandonment by the Russians of the Brest Litovsk line and with a continuation of their advance into the vast empire, the battles that are to decide the future fate of Europe may be fought out along this third line of Russian defensive. The bulletin reads:

"Probably the dreariest belt in all Russia is that through which the third line of Russian western defense is traced. This line runs through the middle of the white Russian's country, a land of backwardness and poverty, where an unfavoring nature and a past whose history is full of luckless chance have, alike, proved stepmotherly to the development of the country and its people. The sections of this line of immediate interest are those beginning at Riga, on the Baltic, and following the broad Dvina river to Duenaburg, turning south at Duenaburg and following the railway through Vilna, Lida, Baranovichi, into the trackless swamps of Pinsk and the Pripet river to Rovno, 120 miles east-northeast of Lemberg.

"The northern part of this line is reenforced by a line from Duenaburg, behind Vilna and Lida, which is based upon the marshes of Pinsk. Much of the surface of these marshes would be unfeasible for military operations not undertaken in aeroplanes and dirigibles. There is, however, no other present stretch of railway so favorably situated parallel with the Russian front as the stretch immediately behind the Brest Litovsk line, from Osowiec to Kovel, and that just before the third line, from Vilna, through Lida, Baranovichi, to Rovno. There is one line of rail, running southeast, the Vilna-Minsk-Gomel stretch, and another line from Minsk, southwest, to Baranovichi, and thence by the present outpost tranverse line to Rovno.

"More than 200 miles of the line directly below Minsk is through morass and marsh land, whose defense will be little cause of worry to the Russians. A vast part of this water-logged area to the north of the Pripet swamps has been included in great Russian reclamation projects, and millions of roubles have been expended to obtain a proper drainage for the land, whose thick crust of black earth, decayed vegetation, is expected to be among the most fruitful future farm land in the black-earth belt. A little more than 100 miles north of Minsk, and reaching past Duenaburg, is a level country, ever and again broken by low swells, whose surface is strewn with such a wonderful maze of lakes as to far outrival the lakes of Masuren-land. The whole region in the center of the line is thickly forested, primeval, formidable forests bristling across many of its sections. Moreover, the whole area surrounding the third line of defense is crossed by innumerable rivers, riverlets and creeks, most of them flowing north and south, mobilizing in the low Pinsk swamp region, and their waters finally finding their way westward into the mighty Dnieper and into the Black sea."

Readings are given at each session by Mrs. Almedia B. Waltz, who is a graduate from the dramatic art department of Valparaiso university, and of the Elias Day School of Lyceum, Chicago. Music throughout the institute is being furnished by the Indianapolis Conservatory of Music. On Thursday evening a musical entertainment will be given at the First M. E. church at Wayne and Lafayette streets, by students from the Indianapolis conservatory. The institute Monday morning was opened with prayer by Rev. D. H. Guild, pastor of the First M. E. church.

Monday Afternoon.

At the session Monday afternoon Dr. Hollis spoke on "Silent Suggestions in the Teacher," and Dr. Geisel on "The Home Behind the Man."

While not a part of the institute, the teachers in attendance and others will have an unusual opportunity to gain information concerning the world-famous Gary schools, of which Superintendent William A. Wirt is founder, when motion pictures demonstrating the work of these schools will be exhibited at the New Palace theater along with a lecture and descriptive talk by Samuel J. Brickley, principal of the Froebel, Gary's newest and greatest public school. Mr. Brickley, who exhibits the pictures has been associated with Mr. Wirt in his school work for a number of years.

Before adjournment Monday morning Superintendent D. O. McComb gave a short talk to the teachers, urging them not to fail to enroll. The teachers are requested to attend every session if they wish to receive compensation and credit.

MORE ARMY OFFICERS SOUGHT BY GARRISON

Washington, Aug. 30.—Secretary Garrison has directed the war college to submit plans for securing additional regular army officers and a corps of reserve officers, both for the regular army and for a volunteer army or any other force which congress may authorize. This step was taken with a view of recommendations to congress at its coming session.

Secretary Daniels is also expected to recommend additional officers for the navy regardless of the building program yet to be decided upon. A plan is under consideration by which the number of officers in the navy will be placed on the basis of its tonnage. Under such a system there would be an automatic increase in the number of officers as the number of ships was increased.

Wilson Abandons Vacation.

President Wilson has given up all idea today of further extended vacation this year. He had planned to spend the whole month of September at Cornish, N. H. But his plans now are not to leave Washington until the situation between the United States and Germany clears, if he leaves at all.

The president already has received assurances from official German sources which he hopes will result in solving the controversy with Germany over her submarine warfare. He is waiting, however, for Germany to make formal disavowal of the attack on the Arabic and assurances of safety to Americans on the high seas in the future.

Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, had returned today to the summer embassy on Long Island, satisfied that an amicable understanding would be reached regarding the Arabic tragedy, as well as all other issues with Germany. He probably will not return here pending the receipt by the Washington government of further word from Berlin.

Predicts Democratic Success.

Mr. Bryan is very optimistic as to the future of the democratic party and predicted a democratic victory at the next presidential election.

"The democratic party has certainly earned a verdict of approval," he declared.

The former secretary of state was asked his opinion of Mr. Wilson's renomination for the presidency to which he replied that inasmuch as Mr. Wilson had not discussed the matter himself it was not wise for him to. He had nothing but praise for the president. He made no comment on the controversy between Secretary of War Garrison and Mr. Roosevelt as a result of the latter's recent speech at Plattsburg, N. Y.

Mr. Bryan made inquiry concerning a number of his Fort Wayne friends. Judge S. M. Hench called at the Anthony hotel and accompanied the distinguished visitor to the Lake Shore depot.

Except that he has aged considerably Mr. Bryan has changed but little since his last visit in Fort Wayne. Mr. Bryan's presence in the city was not generally known.

GILBERT IS RETURNED.

Paris, Aug. 30.—Eugene Gilbert, the French aviator, whose return to Switzerland after his escape from internment in that country, was ordered by the French government, arrived in Berne yesterday, escorted by Captain Dufore, of the Swiss army, according to Havas News agency dispatch today from Berne. The aviator, whose recent escape was said to have been effected after he had withdrawn his promise not to try to get away, was received by the Swiss staff and was informed that he was considered as an officer interned without having given his word of honor.

Gilbert arrived this morning at the village of Hospenthal, where he was interned anew. All the Swiss papers, the dispatch states, declare that a most excellent impression has been created in Switzerland by the return of Gilbert.

When Ethel Fosnaugh was led to the altar by Chester Bechtol she supposed she was to be merely an helpmeet and not the breadwinner. After four years of experimenting she finds that she took on the whole contract and now asks the superior court to give her back her freedom from marital bonds and her maiden name. In the complaint drawn for her by Attorney Leonard M. Bane she says they were married September 16, 1911, and separated July 1, 1915. Cruel and inhuman treatment is charged. She alleges that Chester not only gave her no support, but let her work for not only her own living, but for his, and finally last month abandoned her. She also says that she has seen him in the company of other women.

JAMES T. CALLAHAN WILL RETURN HERE

James T. Callahan is to soon become a resident of Fort Wayne again after a lapse of four or five years, during which he was chief dispatcher of the Buffalo division of the Nickel Plate, with headquarters at Conneaut. This is the substance of items published in the Conneaut and the Bellevue papers. According to the story, which could not be confirmed here on account of the absence from his office of Supt. W. F. Watterson.

Mr. Callahan is to be chief clerk in that office, succeeding P. J. H. Myers, who took a leave of absence some time ago and went to California, where it is said he will reside in the future. Mr. Callahan was engaged in railroad work in Fort Wayne over a third of a century, commencing with the Pennsylvania and going thence to the Nickel Plate. He was a train dispatcher a number of years at this point and later chief night dispatcher.

FIND COMPTROLLER'S ACCOUNTS CORRECT

State Accounting Board's Report Shows Clean Sheet There.

The state accounting board has rendered its report on the recent examination made by Field Examiners Leonard R. Schrader and James P. Haefling of the accounts in the office of City Comptroller W. C. Baade for the year 1914. The examiners found that save for a slight confusion of figures in which small sums were not credited to the proper accounts that the comptroller's books were correct. During the year the city electric light and power works offices were in the comptroller's office and its accounts were kept there. The greatly overworked condition of the force led to some errors. Every correction has been made and the books of the finance department balance perfectly.

ALL GOT COLD FEET.

Everybody at the annual picnic of the members of the city council, held Sunday at the Cripple club's grounds on the St. Joe river, north of Robison park, got cold feet except City Attorney Guy Colerick, School Trustee A. L. Randall and Secretary J. H. Gilpin, of the board of health. This was not due to the fact that the scene of some of the diversions was transferred from outdoors, where the murky sky was the limit, to the shelter of a low-browed tent, but because of the dampness of the ground. The three immunes wore rubber soles and otherwise were lucky. A big crowd attended the picnic, there being besides the members of the council, who were hosts, practically all the city officials and their staffs, including Mayor Hosey, who sidestepped a Sunday at his Rome City cottage to share the good cheer of the occasion. Many county officials and men prominent in the politics of all the political parties, save the prohibitionist organization, were guests of honor. County Treasurer J. Herman Bueter modestly uncovered himself as a phenom in performing on a guitar and County Assessor William Eggemann maintained his claim to championship honors pitching horseshoes. An elaborate luncheon was spread and kept spread from noon until the wee small hours, or about sundown, because there was nothing else to do. The councilmen proved themselves most hospitable hosts and princely entertainers and were wished by their guests many returns of the day.

TO INSPECT MOTOR EQUIPMENT.

Mayor W. J. Hosey, Members George Hermann, James J. Hayes and Calvin K. Rieman, of the board of safety, and Assistant Fire Chief George Jasper will go to Cincinnati Tuesday, to be present at an exhibit and test of motor driven fire apparatus that is to take place Wednesday, when all the big makers of such fire apparatus will have their machines in the competition. Assistant Chief Jasper will probably remain at the convention of fire chiefs throughout the week. The officials hope to gain some knowledge that will be of value in making purchases of apparatus for engine house No. 1, which is to be completely motorized next year.

BOULEVARD RESOLUTIONS UP.

Provided there should be the presence of a quorum, Monday afternoon, the park board had scheduled for final hearing and confirmation boulevard resolutions. No. 9 and No. 11—the first for the grading of Anthony boulevard from the Maumee river to State boulevard and the other for the construction of sidewalks on the east side of Anthony from Lake avenue to the Maumee river.

NINETEEN CASES OF TYPHOID.

The records of the health department show that for the first eight months of the present year there have been nineteen cases of typhoid fever in Fort Wayne. A large number of these were infectious from outside the city. The latest case to be reported is of H. Arnett, 4001 Piqua avenue.

SHOP AND RAILROAD NEWS

SEVERAL SHOPMEN ARE PROMOTED

H. T. Hogan, W. B. Madara and J. T. Leach Among the Lucky Ones.

A change in the personnel of the foremanship in the Pennsylvania shops, which is probably the greatest because of the number of men affected in the history of the plant, has just been announced by Master Mechanic E. E. Griest. It is as follows:

H. T. Hogan, material inspector.

W. B. Madara, machine shop foreman, succeeding Mr. Hogan.

F. H. Schaffer, assistant machine foreman, succeeding Mr. Madara.

J. T. Leach, erecting shop foreman, succeeding E. E. Dildine.

P. A. Meyers, assistant erecting shop foreman.

C. P. Cherry, transferred from division storekeeper to the motive power office as storekeeper.

J. B. Fowler, division storekeeper, to succeed Mr. Cherry.

Henry Zimmerman, of Chicago, assistant division storekeeper, succeeding Mr. Fowler.

A. S. Courtney, transferred to the motive power office as machine tool inspector for the entire Northwest system.

It will be noticed that, with one exception, all the men affected by the promotions are now and have been for several years connected with the Fort Wayne shops. They know all of the employes and all of the employes know them and rejoice in their advancement. Often, when there is a change to be made in foremanship, the man selected is brought from another part of the system or perhaps from another railroad, but in filling the positions at this time Master Mechanic E. E. Griest found just what was needed among the men who have been associated with him in shop work for several years and he advanced them. It was not generally known that changes were to be made and the announcement creates much surprise and the men connected with the works look upon it as an official expression of satisfaction with the manner in which shop work in Fort Wayne is carried on. One of the last official acts of Supt. Otto Schroll before he left for California was to confirm these appointments.

Of the combined service with the Pennsylvania of the men affected by these promotions—148 years—Hugh T. Hogan has one-third of the time to his credit, having been employed in the local shops forty-four years. He is a native of Rochester, N. Y., where he learned the machinists' trade. At the completion of his apprenticeship he came to Fort Wayne in the spring of 1869, but finding no work he made arrangements with the foreman of the Pennsylvania shops to notify him when a place was open, and he went to Chicago, where he found employment in a small shop. A few weeks later he received a letter informing him that a "job" awaited him in the shops of the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago in this city and he returned here and has worked in the shops ever since. The records show that he began as a machinist October 1, 1869, and was appointed foreman of the machine shop in 1890, succeeding Bernard Fitzpatrick, who that year became master mechanic of the Wellsville shops.

W. B. Madara served his apprenticeship in the Wabash, beginning in 1899. Early in 1902 he went to Auburn and for a short time was employed in the gas engine works, returning to Fort Wayne the same year to take employment in the Pennsylvania shops, where he has since been employed as a journeyman machinist, gang foreman, piecework pricemaker and assistant machine shop foreman.

Next to Mr. Hogan, in point of years served, comes Frank H. Schaffer. He began as a laborer in the machine shop in 1892, but during the following eight or nine years acquired a knowledge of mechanics which entitled him to advancement and he became a gang foreman in 1901 and had charge of the wheel lathe department in the machine shop ever since.

John T. Leach began his career at the Pennsylvania shops in the capacity of a messenger in the erecting department in 1900. In 1902 he became an apprentice and at the close of the term worked for awhile as a journeyman machinist. In 1909 he was appointed a gang foreman and two or three years later became assistant foreman of the erecting shop. While in that position he had full charge of the department much of the time, Foreman E. E. Dildine being engaged in inspecting locomotives at the Baldwin aand the Dunkirk works. When Mr. Dildine went to the Eastern division as assistant master mechanic about eight months ago, Mr. Leach became acting foreman of the erecting shop and remained in that position up to the present.

Paul A. Meyers learned his trade in the factory of the Fort Wayne Electric works, later working awhile at the trade at the Bass works. He came to the Pennsylvania shops in 1900 and became a gang foreman in the erecting shop in 1908. Mr. Meyers has spent a good deal of time in the past three or four years inspecting construction work at the locomotive works where the company's engines were built. He is now out on a mission of that kind and possibly has not heard of his promotion.

Charles P. Cherry became material distributer in the storeroom in 1883 and was thus engaged when Enoch Cox, the division storekeeper, died in 1902. Then Mr. Cherry became the division storekeeper and has filled the office since.

John B. Fowler's career with the Pennsylvania dates from 1906, when he took employment in the supplies department of the Allegheny shops. He came to Fort Wayne in 1910, as a clerk in the storeroom, and four months later was appointed assistant storekeeper.

Henry Zimmerman is a Chicago man and is the only one in the list who was not a resident of Fort Wayne when he received his appointment. He is a brother to Paul Zimmerman, storekeeper at the Chicago shops, and has been for some time employed as an assistant in that department.

A. S. Courtney is a native of Boston, coming here to work as a special apprentice in the shops and motive power department in 1905. Since 1909, until a few months ago, he was employed in the machine shop, the greater portion of the time as assistant to General Foreman Hogan. A few months ago Mr. Courtney was called to the motive power department to take up a special work, similar to that which will occupy his attention when he assumes the duties of his new office.

Care of Hands In Summer

BY ANNETTE ANGERT.

IN summer constant care of the hands is necessary for the reason that the hand is exposed to rough exercise and to hot suns and winds. Rowing, especially, subjects the skin to that blistering sunbeam that comes from the reflection of sunlight on water, and the palms of the hands to callouses.

After coming in from any outdoor exercise in which heavy gloves have not been worn, bathe the hands in warm water to cleanse them. Corn meal or oatmeal, mixed with almond meal, is excellent to wash them with, because the meal not only cleanses but softens and soothes the cuticle. Then, if the sun has been very hot, bathe them with vinegar in which a little water has been stirred, and gently rub cold cream or cow's cream into the skin. The hands may then be dusted with oatmeal and wiped off. They will look soft and milky white and feel refreshed.

At night use a lotion on them, or meal and milk, and then cold cream, letting the cream remain on all night. Rub some of the cream into the corners of the nails every night, or every alternate night, to prevent the skin becoming callous at the corners, and twice each day push the flesh down from the nail with an orange stick. Repeat this every time the hands are washed, using a towel for the purpose.

It will be easy to keep the nails in good condition if the orange stick is used frequently, and the file employed every day, keeping the nail corners well rounded. Smooth the edges with an emery board and then soak the finger ends in rain water or distilled water, mixed with glycerine and rosewater. This will soften the nails so that any ragged ends at the corners may be trimmed off with the nail scissors. Never use a sharp instrument to cleanse the nails, for the skin beneath the nail and the nail itself will be roughened and scratched so that it will require a long time to remove the injury and to cleanse the nails afterward.

Where the fingers are really dirty use oil to wash them, wiping it off thoroughly before washing the hands with soap and water. Stains may be removed with pumice stone, lemon juice or, if obstinate, turpentine. After the nails are clean, trimmed and rounded with the file into an oval shape, polish them with pink manicure paste and then with a clean buffer. Five minutes' care of the hands at night, and ten minutes' care of the nails in the morning will save frequent hours of manicuring.

EASY LIVING

Should Be Goal of Women Who Would Always Be Well.

BY LUCILLE DAUDET

A BUSY clubwoman, a woman doctor, a business woman and a schoolma'am, ranging in their ages from twenty-five to forty-five, happened to come together late one afternoon in the room of a sweet old soul who has been a shut-in, and bedridden, for many years.

The old lady, propped among her pillows, looked from one tired face to another, while each of her visitors told how they had hurried in their duties in order to spend a little time with her. She listened sympathetically, and when they had finished, she began in the mildest of tones to read them a little lecture.

"I want you to look at me," she said. "I want you to remember how you have seen me all these years. And I want you to go back a great many years with me and take a lesson from my life.

"You see me a helpless old woman here, and I should be dead now but for my dear children, who carry me on their hands, as it were. But if I had only known long ago how to take care of myself, I would be on my feet now, active and useful, and glad to be living.

"Nobody thought there was any limit to what a woman should do in my day. Our parents started us to work when we were mere babies. When I see my little granddaughter come in from her outdoors play, I think how much better things are now for the little girls. Oh, how we girls had to work! And so much of it was indoor work.

"How well I remember, when I was thirteen years old, one of our neighbor families was taken down with typhoid fever. Five were sick at one time. Neighbors helped each other out in those days. I was only thirteen, but I had to do my share, and I was sent over there to do all the housework and all the washing for that family. I was there three weeks, and when I came home I was sick. My parents were getting ready to go on a long visit, and as they thought I wasn't really sick, they went and left me home with my sister. The next day I was in bed with pleurisy, and, though I got well of that in time, somehow I never really seemed to get real strong again.

"I wasn't taught how to save myself, and I thought it was my duty to never spare my own strength. I married young and went to my husband's farm, where a woman's burdens were even worse, for then the children came—quickly. I can't tell you—I just can't tell you—how I worked. And nobody ever told me different or warned me what I would come to. I saw wrecks of women all around, but I didn't take it to myself.

"So I want you to look at me and take me for an example. I used to think city women wouldn't come to what country women come to. But city women expect too much of themselves, too. Every time I see your faces they look more tired, and though your voices are always kind in this room, I feel they're growing sharper underneath, and when you speak of your work it's always about the hurry of it. You know so much more than the women of my time knew, and you ought to know that women can't stand so much

ODDS & ENDS

FOR a bride-elect who will be married in January her bevy of friends arranged to purchase appropriate articles, one for each month of her first year. For January there was a good cook book with all verse apropos the need of just such a book in the household. February is a good month when a woman lives to make fancy work, so the little handkerchief bag was filled with the trifles needed in the work basket. March brought out a fan. Of course April was suggestive of house cleaning, and the kitchen apron, bar of soap and dustpan were very appropriate articles. So these gifts were all cleverly arranged, and while there was not an expensive article among them, they provided a happy surprise.

THE following are different ways in which milk may be prepared for children who dislike to take milk: Beat the yolk of an egg light, add a teaspoonful of sugar and half a teaspoonful of lemon uice; fill the cup with milk, stir well and call the mixture snow lemonade. Heat a cupful of milk, but do not let it boil, sweeten it and flavor with a little cinnamon and pour from a tiny teapot, calling it cinnamon tea. Put a cupful of milk and the white of one egg into a glass jar; add a little sugar, screw down the top of the jar and shake until the ingredients are thoroughly blended; flavor with orange and serve as orangeade. Cocoa made with milk is liked by most children, and is even more nutritious than the milk alone.

ONE may have dozens of hooks in a closet, yet they will not take the place of one long curtain rod placed well back in the closet where skirts can be hung. The skirt hangers with large hooks must be used and dozens of skirts can be hung on this pole and take up so little room that it is remarkable that the idea is so late in making its arrival. Then if the hooks are placed closely together in neat rows, instead of here, there and everywhere, the waists can be placed on neat little paper hangers and hung in orderly rows, and it does not mean hanging several waists on one hook to be overtopped with a petticoat or bolero jacket, all to be taken down when the lower waist is needed. If women learned to properly place hooks in the clothes presses and wardrobes there would be less demand for more dress room.

TO wash corsets, first rip the front seam on both sides and take out the steels. Then dissolve some soap jelly, made by shredding half a pound of the best yellow soap in one quart of boiling water, and simmering until dissolved in warm water. Two tablespoonfuls of jelly to half a gallon of water is usually sufficient, but hard water may require more. Put the corsets into the suds and allow them to soak for five minutes. Then spread them on a board and brush thoroughly with a well-soaped nail brush, dipping them occasionally into the suds to remove the loosened dirt. When clean, rinse through two lots of warm water and hang up to drip dry. When almost dry, iron on the inside with a warm flat iron, and after thorough airing replace the front steels and sew them firmly in. If this is carefully done, the corset will emerge from the washtub as good as new.

IT is impossible to tell whether a color is fast before washing, but by far the safest plan is to "set the colors" before it goes to the tub for the first time. One of the best methods of setting delicate colors consists in simply making a strong brine of cold water and salt and soaking the garment from twelve to twenty-four hours. Of course this should be done just before going to the laundry, and the salt should not be allowed to dry in it. This is especially good for all shades of pink and green, and colors once set this way will be bright as long as it would be reasonable to expect it. A strong solution of alum water is good, particularly with blues and the more delicate shades of brown, but its effect is not so lasting as that of salt, and it is sometimes necessary to renew the bath after the first three or four washings.

THE "Do Do Room" is the most interesting feature of a New York home, according to a writer—a completely equipped play room, where the word don't is never uttered. The idea of this room originated with paterfamilias, whose childhood was rendered unhappy by continually hearing "Don't do this!" or "Don't do that!" The room itself is a large sunny place, splendidly ventilated by plenty of windows, which are safely barred. One end of the hardwood floor is uncovered, while the other has a thick woolen rug, fastened down so securely that acrobatic feats or any amount of running or sliding cannot loosen it. The walls, which are deadened, so that noises cannot penetrate to other parts of the house, are covered with blue paper from which finger prints can be easily washed off. The pictures and electric lights are caged, this precaution making possible a mild game of baseball or any amount of handball or beanbag tossing. The chairs (minus rockers) and the tables are made with rounded corners. The fear of breaking dainty bric-a-brac does not bother the little inmates of the "Do Do Room" and the built-in bookcases, where favorite books and magazines abound, have no glass doors to be kept away from, or silk curtain which must not be touched.

MECCA FOR STOUT WOMEN

BY EDNA EGAN.

WHAT though the stout lady sighs to be thin? It is not so everywhere. There is Mecca for the fat in Ibibio—and that's in Nigeria.

Many and mysterious rites govern the lives of the women of the Ibibios, who have their secret societies, jealously guarded from men. According to Mrs. D. Amaury Talbot, wife of a prominent official of the country, these societies strike a note between freemasonry and trade unionism, and form the only safeguard of the Ibibio women against the tyranny of their menfolk.

One of the customs of these women is to go in procession to a certain pool in the garb of Lady Godiva. All men must keep indoors during this ceremony ,and any "Peeping Tom" who seeks to intrude on this, one of the most sacred of the feminine mysteries, used to be liable to the death penalty. Even today he is heavily fined, and would be hardly likely to live to see another such festival.

But the strangest institution is known as the fatting-house. The first great event in the life of an Ibibio girl is her entrance into the fatting-house, where she is kept in seclusion for a few months, allowed to eat as much as she likes, and is pampered on every side. Free-born girls, of good family, go twice and sometimes three times, into the fatting-house before their marriage.

The second period varies, according to the wealth of the family, from a few weeks to two years, and girls of good position who are regarded as likely to repay the expenditure by the man's dowry money are sometimes sent a third time into the fatting-house.

The result is that they ultimately emerge, to the admiration of their adoring relatives and to the townfolk at large, perfect mountains of flesh.

"A day is set apart," said Mrs. Talbot, "for the first appearance of the girls of each town who are ready to emerge from the fatting-house. On several occasions we have been present when these swollen specimens of femininity strutter through the marketplace, enjoying their brief hour of importance, while the men, who at every other period of a woman's existence are looked upon as of superior race, draw back admiringly to give them passage.

"The wooers, who stand during this parade appraising the merits and value of the various debutantes, afterward hurry to the parents with offers of dowry. A marriage is speedily arranged for each, and the young bride quickly finds her place amid the new surroundings, no longer petted, spoiled, and pampered, the center of attention for whom her family stint and deny themselves, but only too often the slighted, hard-worked drudge of her new lord."

The etiquette of marriage differs widely in different lands. In Russia the night before the ceremony a dance is given which lasts all night, and on the actual day of the marriage the bridegroom and his friends walk about the village playing musical instruments and throwing sugar to the children.

In Spain etiquette is so restrictive in courtship, and it is so difficult for young people to get to know one another, that one wonders how they ever manage to get married at all. Even when, after many difficulties, the engagement is accomplished, the parents have a deciding voice in fixing the date; and, as they prefer long engagements, the wedding day is usually fixed somewhere in the dim future.

The best man and maid of honor are expected not only to fulfill the usual duties, but to contribute—sometimes very substantially—to the expenses of the wedding feast. Wedding cake is unknown, but instead packets of sugared almonds are distributed among the guests and sent by post to them who are unable to be present.

A Norwegian wedding is a delightful spectacle.

The picturesque Norwegian national costume is worn, and the wedding party—in pretty carriages or on foot—walks or drives in procession to the church. After the ceremony there is a dance on the village green, with a violin for accompaniment, till it is time for supper. The next day the festivities are resumed, and possibly they may extend to the day after.

THE KITCHEN

Graham Gems.

Three cups of graham flour (sift it if you want to), 2 teaspoons baking powder, 1 egg, 1 cup milk, ½ cup of water, ½ teaspoon of salt. Beat thoroughly and pour into heated gem pans. Bake 15 to 20 minutes.

Meat Pie.

Cook 3 pints of potatoes until done, mash and add a little cream and salt. Spread in the pie dish like a paste, fill with thin slices of underdone meat, either beef, mutton, veal or chicken, laid in thickly. Pour over them some gravy and 1 wineglass of catchup. Cover thick with mashed potatoes and bake till brown about 25 minutes.

Oysters A La Dumas.

Mix together in a bowl a heaping teaspoon of salt, ½ a teaspoon of white pepper, 1 small shallot chopped very fine, a teaspoon of chopped chives, ½ a teaspoon of minced parsley, a teaspoon of olive oil, 6 drops of table sauce, a saltspoon of table salt, and 5 tablespoons of vinegar. Mix thoroughly and serve as a sauce for raw oysters.

Steamed Fruit Pudding.

Mix a cup of seedless raisins, the same of cleaned currants, the same of shredded citron, and the same of chopped suet. Dust over 4 tablespoons of flour. Add 4 tablespoons of brown sugar and a ½ cup of molasses, into which you have stirred ½ teaspoon of soda dissolved in a tablespoon of water. Stir in a pint and a half of rolled oats, add 2 well-beaten eggs, a teaspoon of cinnamon, pinch of nutmeg. Pack into a mold, cover and steam for 2 or more hours (continuously). Serve with liquid pudding sauce.

Candied Orange Peel.

Remove all white membrane from peel. Cut peel with scissors into long strips ¼ inch wide. Boil for 20 minutes in clear water, skim out from water, then repeat until it has boiled in four waters. Measure the peel and return to saucepan with an equal measure of granulated sugar. The moisture from the peel will melt the sugar. Boil gently in this sirup as long as possible, i. e., until syrup is boiled away, stirring carefully lest it burn. Spread peel on large platters to dry, tossing frequently with forks, and sprinkle granulated sugar over it. When cold pack in tight tin boxes and it will keep moist for weeks.

Lucana Potatoes.

Wash and bake six large potatoes, cut a slice from the top of each potato, scoop out the inside and mash. To three cupfuls of mashed potato add six cupfuls of finely chopped ham, two tablespoonfuls of finely chopped parsley, whites of two eggs, well beaten, four tablespoonfuls of cream or rich milk, salt and pepper to taste. Line potato shells with this mixture, place in each cavity a poached egg, and cover well the mixture and bake until browned. Poach the egg delicately. Boiled stuffed potatoes are popular.

Delmonico Potatoes.

Reheat 2 cups cold boiled potatoes cut in dice in 1¼ cups white sauce. Put in buttered baking dish, cover with buttered crumbs, add to potatoes ½ cup grated mild cheese, arranging potatoes and cheese in alternate layers before covering with crumbs.

White Sauce—Two tablespoons butter, 1 cup milk, 2 tablespoons flour, ¼ teaspoon salt, few grains pepper. Put butter in a saucepan, stir until melted and bubbling, add flour mixed with seasoning and stir until thoroughly blended. Pour on gradually milk, adding about one-third at a time, stirring until well mixed, then beating until smooth and glossy.

New England Deviled Clams.

Put 2 tablespoons of butter into a saucepan and fry in it a chopped onion. Add 1 cup of canned tomatoes, a pinch of powdered mace, and salt and paprika to taste. Cook for five minutes, add a tablespoon of flour, take from the fire, and add 2 eggs slightly beaten. Add 3 dozen prepared clams, chopped fine. Mix thoroughly, fill buttered clam shells, cover with crumbs dot with butter, and bake brown.

20,000 SUNDAY'S CROWD AT WINONA

Bible Conference Enjoys Greatest Day in Its 20 Years' History.

Warsaw, Ind., Aug. 30.—With Billy Sunday, William J. Bryan and Schumann-Heink as the main attractions, the Winona Bible conference experienced the greatest day in its twenty years of existence yesterday. Twenty thousand persons were on the grounds. At least 7,500 of them came in automobiles from cities and towns within a radius of 100 miles. Actual counting showed more than 1,500 automobiles parked along the driveways.

William J. Bryan was the morning speaker in the auditorium. He spoke to an audience of 6,000 persons. Billy Sunday addressed the overflow in one of the greatest outdoor meetings ever held at Winona. In the afternoon Mr. Bryan introduced Rev. Mr. Sunday in the auditorium, then went to the hillside to assist Evangelist "Bob" Jones and other speakers in addressing the crowd that could not be accommodated inside. Meetings also were conducted at Indian Mound by Rev. W. E. Biederwolf, and at another point by Mrs. W. A. Sunday and Mrs. William Asher.

Prof. E. O. Excell of Chicago, led the chorus of more than 600 voices. Among the singers were 150 evangelistic singers. Mme. Schumann-Heink, who came from New York to Winona to sing, free of charge before the Bible conference, was in the audience.

PREPARE TO DRYDOCK RAISED SUBMARINE

Nothing Yet Divulged Regarding Conditions Inside the F-4.

Honolulu, Aug. 30.—Work preliminary to the drydocking of the submarine F-4, lost in the Honolulu harbor with 22 men March 26, and raised yesterday, was under way today. It was expected the craft would be placed in dry dock tomorrow. Until then nothing definite can be announced as to what caused the disaster. The F-4 was raised by the pontoon method, six special pontoons, each with lifting capacity of 60 tons having been constructed at the Mare Island, California, navy yard for the purpose after all other methods proved unavailing.

The actual raising operation yesterday occupied two hours, the plans of the engineers working without a hitch. The boat was towed into the harbor where all the shipping including the interned German gunboat, Geier, lowered flags to half mast.

When the submarine has been placed in dry dock a board composed of Rear Admiral Clifford J. Boush, commandant of the navy station; Lieutenant Kirby B. Crittendon and Naval Constructor Julius A. Furer will begin a thorough investigation to learn the cause of the disaster.

Nothing has been divulged by the naval officials regarding conditions if known, inside the vessel.

RUMORED LOSS OF TRANSPORT DENIED

Ottowa, Ont., Aug. 30.—Official denial was given here last night to the report contained in the Berlin message by wireless to Sayville, N. Y., that a British troop ship carrying 2,000 Canadian troops had been sunk off the Scilly islands on August 15. The military authorities issued the following statement regarding the report:

"Between the 31st of July and the 24th of August only two troop ships with more than 300 troops on board have been despatched from Canada and they have both arrived safely at their destinations. Moreover, every troop ship bearing Canadian troops which was at sea on August 15 has arrived safely at its destination. There is no Canadian troop ship overdue and if the story coming via Sayville has any basis for truth it must refer to the torpedoing of the Canadian Northern steamship Royal Edward in the Aegean, the report of which event reached Canada August 17."

THE BERLIN REPORT.

Berlin, Saturday, Aug. 28.—(By wireless to Sayville, Aug. 29.)—Passengers on the Holland-American line steamship Ryndan arriving in Amsterdam bring a report that a British transport with 2,000 Canadian troops on board was torpedoed off the Scilly islands on August 15. It is said about 1,000 men were saved.

Romp Day Wed. Sept. 1

The annual Romp day will be held at Robison park on Wednesday, September 1. Every boy and girl in Fort Wayne and Allen county is invited. It is just one big day of fun from morning till night. The biggest candy treat of the year is on Romp day. You remember the big baskets of all-day suckers? There were 5,000 of them in the baskets last year and there will be just as many on September 1. Even the grownups can't keep out of the candy scramble. Then there are the baseballs from the theater roof, the copper trail, the greased pole, the big parade, the awarding of the four bicycles and the big doll. The central event is the annual popularity contest. The girl polling the largest number of votes will receive a diamond ring. The girls are all so lovely and charming that you will have difficulty in deciding which one you really prefer. The voting is free in the Popularity contest and every man, woman, girl and boy should show their interest by voting for their favorite candidate. It does not matter whether you know them personally or not. Just vote for the one you like best.

STREET RAILWAY MEN FORM ORGANIZATION

Union Will Be Perfected at Meeting to Be Held in Near Future.

After several weeks of hard work an organization of street railway men has been organized in Fort Wayne to be known as Division No. 682, Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes of America. The membership is composed of motormen and conductors on the city lines, but how many are identified with the new organization has not been announced. A meeting will be held in the near future for the purpose of perfecting the organization. Delegates to the Fort Wayne Federation of Labor will be selected and delegates also will be named to the state convention to be held at Gary, September 28, 29 and 30. Under the provisions of the new union there is a death benefit of from $200 to $800; a total disability benefit of the same amount; an old age pension of $800, after the members have attained ages of fifty-five years and have belonged to the organization twenty years.

Accident Delays Traffic.

Traffic on the South Wayne line was delayed for half an hour Sunday evening, as the result of a Ford automobile, driven by N. L. BenDure, 216 East Leith street, crashing into South Wayne car, No. 207, in charge of Conductor Charles H. Close and Motorman Fred Wells. The Ford was badly damaged, but BenDure and the other occupants of the car escaped uninjured. The accident occurred at Kinnard and South Wayne streets.

Thrilling Tales of Love and Adventure

A Real, Livin' Bill

By Annette Angert

DAVE and Jon was a heap contrarier than any mule that ever lived. The fool streak didn't run in any of the other Minders; seemed like it jest centered in Dave and Jon, who was twins. But they got cured of it.

They was the only childurn their pap and mother had for twenty years; and then along come another'n, a boy—and a boy so fine-lookin' and so promisin' that he made up for all the years between him and Dave and Jon. His pap and mother named him Bill, for his Grandpap Minder; and the way they went on over that thar boy did shore tickle everybody. It was Bill this, and Bill that; the sun rose and set in Bill—as well as the moon and stars; the world turned only for Bill's sake.

And as the years begun to add theirselves together on the boy's head, he growed still finer-lookin' and still smarter. His hair was as yaller as gold, and it curled up like the feelers of wild grapevines, and he wore them thar curls until he had to cut 'em off hisself, too! His eyes was as blue as the sky, and his skin was as soft as a girl's. And not only did the old folks dote on little Bill; Dave and Jon, great hulks of men and as brown from sunburn as Indians, worshiped him.

Well, when Dave and Jon each took to hisself a wife, of course, they left the old cabin on the Blackfern's crest. Jon went down the east slope a little ways, and built hisself a house amongst the Buckners, who he had married into; Dave went down the west slope to live amongst the Simpsons, his wife's people.

When Bill was about twenty-four, their pap he up and died, and soon after that their mother she follered him. So Bill found hisself alone in the cabin on top o' the Blackfern. Bill didn't like to be by hisself a bit; he was one o' these fellers what likes to have comp'ny around. And he was as open-faced and as bright when he had got to be a young man as he was when he was a boy. But he wasn't as big and strong as his two brothers.

When the old woman's funeral had been held by a preacher from acrost the state line, and fresh dirt had oncet more been banked up under the big beech that spread out over the little buryin' ground of the Minders, which was square on top o' the mountain, Bill started back to his lonesome home. He hadn't no more'n got thar afore his brother Jon, now forty-some-odd years old and a-turnin' gray in his hair and beard, come up to him and put one hand on his arm.

"Bill," says he, "you must come down and live with me from now on. You cain't stay here by yoreself."

Jest at that minute into the door of the cabin steps Dave.

"No," says Dave, "Bill must come down and stay at my house."

"I be durned if he does, neither," says Jon, a-puffin' out like a peacock. "He's a-goin' to stay at my house!"

"I've done laid my plans," says Dave, appealin' to Bill hisself, "to build an extry room to my cabin, jest for you. You shorely won't disapp'int me, will you, Bill?"

"Disapp'int nothin'!" Jon hollers. "I've done laid plans to do the same thing. You hain't no better to be disapp'inted than me, Dave Minder!"

Bill seen then that things was a-gettin clost to the fightin' place. He puts one hand on each of his big brothers' shoulders and gives 'em a shakin'.

"Now jest listen at that!" he tells 'em. "Hain't you fellers ashamed o' that thar fussin' right afore pore old mother's got good and still in the ground? Be ashamed o' yoreselves, Jon and Dave! You needn't to bother to fight about me; I'm a-goin' to stay right here, what I am."

And when he said that, they knowed he'd done spoke.

Jon turns back to Dave. "It was yore fault, consarn you!" he says, a-stickin' his fist up under Dave's nose. "Hadn't 'a' been for you, I'd 'a' got Bill to come down to my house!"

"Don't you git too durned promiscuous with your gab, Jon Minder!" says Dave, a-pushin' Bill, pore little feller, out o' the way. "If you do, you're li'ble to git a maulin' for it!"

Jon stands thar for about two minutes without movin' even his eyes, a-starin' at his twin brother like he could 'a' killed him and slept good over it.

"Don't you worry none about me a'speakin' to you any more," he says to Dave, when he could talk for his madness. "As long as I live I'll never speak to you ag'in, by gyar! And don't you never let me catch you on my side o' this here mountain—d'ye understand that, Dave Minder?"

Dave he was that contrary he wouldn't make no answer. He turns to Bill and says to him:

"Bill, you've heerd what that thar durn fool thar had to say to me. I'll never speak to him ag'in as long as I live and breathe the breath o' life; and Bill, he'd better never show his weasel of a head on my side o' the Blackfern, neither, if he don't want holes shot in it. And if you cain't come down and live with me, Bill, why you can shorely come down and see us now and then. We hain't got much of a place; but we can keep the rain off when it's a-rainin', and we can feed you when you're hongry. Good-by, Bill. Remember the latchstring at my house hangs on the outside. Goodby, Bill."

With that he makes a face at Jon and stalks off down the mountain with some of his wife's folks.

Jon told Bill goodby, and told him the same things Dave had told him about comin' down to see him, and then told him good-by ag'in.

So that's the way the twin brothers got at the outs. I reckon little Bill got more good things to eat, though, on account of it, than anybody in the state; Dave and his wife and Jon and his wife got to pullin' and hawin' to see which could git up the best grub to send up on the mountain to Bill, and each time they'd come they'd try to git Bill to say somethin' ag'in the 'tother side, But Bill would never do that.

So the boy got to takin' life easy. All the things he wanted to eat was brung right to his door, most of it already cooked; and if he fell short any time, he jest took his rifle and went out into the woods and shot some game. To keep from gittin' lonesome, he traded around and got a banjo and a hound dog; and he'd set thar in the door for hours at a time a-pickin' that banjo, with that thar hound a-layin' aside of him.

And then things got serious on the Blackfern. Dave's wife's people and Jon's wife's people took matters in their own hands, and got to watchin' for one another with guns. One of Jon's side got shot in the shoulder, and one of Dave's side got it in the arm, both the same day.

So Bill decided to leave, to see if it wouldn't quiet the fussin' some. He was mighty down in the mouth about it. Besides, he had a little bit of an idee about makin' some money in town, which was about eight miles off. He let 'em know that he'd decided to leave on account o' their fussin' about him. And the first thing they knowed, he'd shore left for town. He couldn't take his dog along; but he left some wet spots on the back of its neck.

It seemed mighty lonesome along the Blackfern after the boy had gone. The hound wouldn't stay at neither one o' the twin brothers' houses, but moped around a-lookin' for Bill, jest like good dogs will do. Jon was afeard o' goin' into the home cabin on account o' runnin' upon Dave thar, and Dave was the same way; so they let the old house alone.

The summer drifted on, and the leaves begun to turn brown on the chestnut trees—and the chestnuts theirselves was a-beginnin to git ripe. Then the leaves begun to fall, and the chestnuts begun to drap off. The two brothers missed little Bill more'n ever then; it was the first time in years that they'd set out to gether chestnuts without him. And each of the sides stayed on their own side of the mountain; thar was no more shootin' at one another after the boy had gone.

Then a wagon from town come a-drivin' along the windin' road and stopped on the crest o' the mountain, and the driver axed for to be showed either to Dave or Jon Minder's. Dave got the word first, and he come a-runnin' up to the town wagon with a rifle in one hand and a gray squirrel in the t'other. And in the wagon he seen a long pine box.

Jon got the news at about the same time it reached his brother Dave. He come a-cuttin' the mustard up the mountain-side, with the big old tears a-blindin' him until he couldn't hardly see.

They set the box out on the ground, and the town wagon drove back. The Minders had axed the driver how it happened; but the driver didn't know anything about it.

They carried the box out along the top o' the mountain, and to the old buryin' ground under the spreadin' beech, whar they dug a grave. Dave and Jon hadn't spoke yit, though. But both of 'em was a-takin ' it to heart pow'ful; both of 'em was a snubbin' into their half-gray beards like childurn what's been whupped. They hated theirselves for it. They didn't open the box, for they felt like they couldn't bear to see pore little Bill. The preacher, who happened to be a-visitin' in the community, come to preach the funeral. He was a' old man, and mighty plain in his talk. He'd been told how Bill come to leave his people. And he shore brought out some of his mind in that thar sermon thar on top o' the Blackfern Mountain!

When Jon had got to his house after it was all over, he set down in the door and put his head on his wife's knee and cried, pore old man! Dave he done the same thing. At each of their cabins thar was still a few old-fashioned flowers left, what the frost hadn't got. Both Dave and Jon took all o' the flowers they had or could git and took 'em out under the spreadin' beech. But they hadn't spoke yit.

The next day Dave and Jon each sat in his house and carved out bill's name on a slab o' slate-rock. And along in the shank o' the evenin' both of 'em took the stones to the graveyard to put 'em up. They met right at the fresh grave. And thar, with the mound atween 'em, each o' them thar gray-headed men put out his hand; and the t'other took it and shook it mighty hard.

Then they spoke at the same time, and each one of 'em said the very same thing:

"What durn fools we was!"

With that they set the stones up at the grave, one at the head and t'other at the foot, with the name turned inards.

And then who should step out o' the bushes right afore their eyes but the real, livin' Bill Minder, dressed in store-bought clothes and all shaved up as smooth as a button! He'd worked in town until he'd got money enough to start the venture he'd been a-thinkin' on for several years.

"I'd like for you fellers to tell me," he says, a-smilin' in his good old way, "jest when I died. And I'd also like for you fellers to tell me," he goes on, "jest what you done with that thar box o' fruit trees I sent out here yisterday!"

Dave and Jon stared, then they all laughed and shook hands.

Naming The Day

By Enos Emory

HELEN was "having the girls over" for the afternoon, and, as usual, they had insisted that she make candy, for her candy seemed better than anyone else's, so the little lamp under the chafing-dish danced merrily, and the girls in their light frocks chattered as girls always will.

Soon, with much teasing of a rosy-faced Helen, the little party broke up, and she came into the house with a faraway look in her eyes that told only too well the subject of her thoughts. It was only a few minutes before the door bell rang, and Robert, "her" Robert, strode into the room, and took her hands in his. Before long they were deep in discussion of the little house they had selected, and of other subjects dear to the hearts of those who are going to be brides.

On the other side of the room the telephone bell tinkled, and tinkled again, and with a little pout Helen got up to answer it.

"Yes, yes. Of course."

Her face white and drawn, her hand at her throat, she turned to Robert, as she put back the receiver.

"Oh, Rob, they called up from the station to say that father has been hurt and they are bringing him home."

During the bustle of preparation, and breaking the news to her mother, Helen scarcely had time to think, until the still form on the stretcher was brought in. The doctor arrived almost at the same time, and went into the sunny room where they had laid her father. She waited outside the door, one hand in Robert's the other playing nervously with her handkerchief. At last the doctor came out. He looked at her gravely.

"It is very serious, Miss Brown, but I think he will live."

In after years, the days that followed seemed like an evil dream to Helen. The long struggle for life, the fight won, but leaving merely the shadow of the strong man that had once been her father, the final verdict of permanent invalidism.

After that he had to give up his position, and the question of a livelihood faced them. They decided that they could not keep up the home that had been theirs for many years, and, with a heart wrench, they packed their pretty things, and moved over to the other side of the town, where they could rent a small house for less than a quarter of what they had been paying. Even then, it was not long before they began to wonder how to make the ends meet. The comfortable bank account that her father had accumulated through the years was leaking away in a horrifying manner, for the mere necessities of life.

They must do something to bring in some money. But what? Helen had been brought up in luxury; before she could master shorthand or bookkeeping they would be without a cent in the world. There was not time for that. One day one of the friends who had still kept up her friendship, as many others had not, was talking it over with her.

"Why don't you and your mother make candy and sell it?"

The more Helen thought this over, the more she felt inclined to try it. She did not feel very hopeful, but at least it was better than nothing. Resolved to make the attempt, at least, she spent part of their fast vanishing hoard for the necessary pots and pans and supplies, then she started around among her friends to see if she could get some orders. The result rather surprised her. Even those who had been a little inclined to look the other way when they saw her on the street were none the less eager for her candy, and she came back from her first afternoon's work with orders for about 50 pounds.

In serviceable gingham aprons, she and her mother set to work in the hot kitchen, and the familiar processes of grating chocolate, measuring sugar and milk, gave Helen a little time to think things over. She had been wondering why Robert had not come over so often recently. He seemed preoccupied and strange when he did. She had tried to keep the thought out of her mind, but now it came back with renewed force. Was Robert tired of her? Had he loved her at all? Was he trying to "break off" with her? Was he ashamed of her poverty, and the district she was obliged to live in?

He was coming over the next Monday evening, and she decided that she would have a serious talk with him, and find out how he really did feel.

All that week she and her mother were busy at the candy making. Friends of her friends, hearing about her new venture, were sending in orders. It was almost more than she could do to fill them. If she could only get a standing order, that she could be sure of, she could hire a girl to do the actual work, and she and her mother could give their time to directing it. Helen was anything but dull, and finally she remembered the restaurant she had been accustomed to eat lunch at when she was in town shopping. She thought her candy was better than theirs, and the manager was such a nice old man, why not see if she could not get a regular order from them? No sooner thought of than done. She ran to the telephone and called him up. He said he would see her Monday afternoon, and told her to bring along a sample box.

The rest of the week passed in a whirl. Monday! She might get that order from the restaurant, and Rob was coming over. She hoped she would find that there was a real cause for his derelictions. At last the great day came.

Arrayed in her remaining best, with a box of candy under her arm, and her heart in her mouth, she went in to see the manager. He laughed and joked with her, talked about everything but business, and ate candy from her box voraciously, at the same time looking her over keenly, though she did not notice it. At last he said:

"You are a pretty young girl to be doing business with. How do I know you would get the stuff here on time, if I did order a little?"

"You just try me and you'll see."

"You might let us have a few pounds then, to be delivered every day. Let's see; you can start with—"

He named an amount that made Helen gasp, and wonder how she was going to get that much out. But she said nothing. She would manage it somehow.

After a grateful thanks, she walked out, her head in the clouds. This meant success, it meant almost wealth to them, after the last few months. Her dream had come true, and she could almost see herself behind a mahogany desk in a real candy factory.

As she neared her home, the thought of Rob returned. What would she find out from him, what would be the result of the evening? Well, she could not affect the result, and would not if she could. If he did not want her—but her bravado left her. She did want him to want her, so much.

Eight o'clock came, struck on the clock in the hall, rang out from the clock in the dining room, and boomed out from the big church clock in the square. Then half past, then 9, but no Rob.

At last she crept into her bed, with an aching heart, and the tears would come, whether or no. What was the use of it all? What did her success matter, as long as she would not talk it over with Rob, as long as Rob did not care for her any more? Tired and unhappy, she sobbed herself to sleep.

Tuesday morning came. She and her mother started in on their big pile of orders, and after a siege at the telephone, Helen succeeded in finding a satisfactory girl, who said she would be right out. The fire was roaring, the sugar and butter and chocolate were being measured out with lightning like rapidity, when Helen heard an automobile stop in front of the house. Who could it be? Robert had no car, she knew.

Then there was a wild ringing of the bell, and with shouts of joy her great big Rob came tearing around the corner of the house and into the kitchen. He wrapped his arms round her, regardless of her protests.

"Helen, darling, I've got the surprise of your life for you. I didn't want to tell you until it was settled, but I have been so busy I was afraid you would think I did not like to come to see you any more. I'm to be manager of our Boston branch, and I've signed the lease for the little house. All you've got to do is to name the day."

Whereupon Helen gave a little gasp of joy, and I am sorry to say, proceeded to smear butter and chocolate all over the back of Rob's new coat, with one great big, joyous hug.

Their Vacation

By Will Seaton

LUCRETIA stepped from beside the iron trolley wire pole, with its band of white, to the street and raised a commanding finger to the motorman. The open car grated along for some ten feet or so past her before coming to a stop.

Indignantly, she moved after the car; at the same time censuring the conductor.

"You are supposed to stop at the crosswalk!" she snapped, with one foot upon the running board.

"Sorry ma'm," apologized the cheerful-featured, slim little wearer of brass buttons. "All aboard," he added, extending an assisting hand.

With a disdainful jerk of her shoulder, she avoided the hand and flounced into the end of the seat. There she sat, with her forehead drawn into an irritable frown and with her lips pressed grimly together, as the car lurched forward and proceeded upon its way. Her eyes were searchlights, flashing their rays about in quest of annoyance, ever vigilant for trouble; for though but barely 30, Lucretia was gradually banishing the attractiveness of her girlhood beneath a mask of irrascibility.

On this afternoon her forehead was contorted into more wrinkles than were customary; her lips were pressed more tightly together than usual. She had just left her husband's office, and remembrances of their conversation were far from agreeable to her. Her thoughts boiled. Andrew was so aggravating! Why didn't he ever do things the way she wanted him to—?

Her husband had informed her that he would be unable to leave for the mountains until the 14th of the month at the earliest, and she had wanted to have them go on the fifth. Some deal, some business with a realty company had to be settled before he could leave, her husband had told her.

"But why couldn't he arrange his business so as not to interfere with our vacation?" her thoughts reasoned, petulantly. "He never cares for my pleasure. . . ."

A burst of laughter, naturally related to a man of big proportions, roused her from her ill-humored reverie.

". . . And I says to the missis, 'You'll have to go to Seaview 'stead of the Peak House—the Peak House is too expensive,'" the stout man on the seat ahead was saying to the man with an exceedingly long neck, who was seated beside him.

Lucretia saw the latter sway forward his neck in a nod of approval.

"If I catered to the missis, she'd have me flat financially in a week," continued the fat man. "She's the most extravagant woman on earth."

"Oh, all of them are always kickin' about something or other," was the pessimistic retort of him with the elongated neck. "My wife expects me to wear a tuxedo around the house and smoke college boy cigarettes. Slippers, shirtsleeves and a pipe shock her sensibilities."

"Say, it's a funny thing about Andy," he exclaimed. "To hear him boast about his wife, you'd think he'd married the paragon of all virtues, yet he doesn't look so happy."

The snort of lengthy-necked Sam was perfectly audible to Lucretia.

"Paragon!" he ejaculated. "Tommyrot! Didn't you ever notice that tired, hunted sort of look in Andy's eyes? Why, my daughter Nellie knows his wife; and Nellie says that she nags Andy perpetually. Andy tries to appear cheerful, but you can bet that his bed of roses is mattressed with thorns."

Lucretia's nails bit into the leather of her handbag. The impudence of the man! To speak of her as "nagging"" Andrew! "Nagging" indeed!

Yet, his remarks haunted her.

And when she left the car at the railroad station, where she was to take a train for her suburban town, she made a determined effort to expel the man's words from her thoughts. But even on the train, they continually popped into her mind. She rebelled. She wasn't a nagger! She had a right to rebuke Andrew! Everything he did was contrary to her wishes!

Then one of the wrinkles smoothed itself from her forehead. She recalled the fact that the man with the long neck had said that Andrew never criticised her—that he boasted about her good qualities.

Well, why shouldn't Andrew speak well of her, she thought. Of course she didn't nag . . . !

Yet she began to wonder.

At 7 o'clock Andrew arrived home, a half hour late for supper, or rather dinner. He was hot and tired, and the look of resignation hovered nearer to the surface of his eyes.

Lucretia met him in the hallway.

"I worked a little late over the Mutual Realty papers, Lu," he stated apologetically. "I came to the conclusion that if I put in so much extra time each day, why, we could leave for the mountains by the ninth or by the tenth of the month, anyway."

To his surprise, Lucretia made no comment regarding his tardiness to the evening meal. Instead, she slipped an arm about him, her hand resting upon his shoulder.

"No, indeed, you will not figure away evenings in your stuffy little office, and tire yourself out by overwork," she declared, striving ineffectually to maintain a severity of tone. "We will leave for the mountains on the fourteenth or later, if necessary."

And throwing her other arm about him, she pressed her face against his tie and shirt front, making strange noises from her concealment.

"All—all right, honey!" agreed the bewildered husband, clasping his arms about her and soothingly patting her shoulder. "But what—what's the matter?"

Her arms tightened about him.

"I—I'm an—old nagger!" came from between sobs.

The Old Dress

By Walt Gregg.

TWO little girls sat under the old apple tree which grew beside the little brown house. Each little mouth was puckered up and each face wore a frown. Carefully placed on the ground beside them were two dolls, on whose faces, in contrast to their small mothers', were blissful though vacant smiles. But the dollies were waiting for the new clothes which the mothers were making, so, of course, they smiled, while the little girls were troubled by perspiring fingers, needle pricks, lost spools of thread and a limited knowledge of dressmaking.

"I think Arabella will look very nice in this white muslin, but I'll have to wash it 'fore she can wear it," said the little one in blue, whose name was Ruth.

"Yes, an' don't you think this pink dress will be pretty for Marie?" Grace, the second little mother, held up her diminutive bit of sewing. "Seems to me that hem looks kind of crooked, I wish I dared ask Alice to hem it for me. She's so cross today, I don't dare to go near her."

"Why, what's the matter with her, Gracie?"

"Oh, she's going away next week, an' she has to have a lot of clothes, she says so she sews all day long, an' so does mamma, an' nobody cares if I have anything or not. Are you going to Edith's birthday party? I'm not! I don't want to!"

"Well, then, why don't you want to go to this party?"

"'Cause I can't have a new dress; now you know! Alice is making a lot of them, but they haven't any time to make me just one. I don't get anything an' she gets everything, an' I haven't had a new dress for years, an' years, an' years!"

Upstairs in the little brown house, her sister, Alice, was trying on one of the dresses which caused her small sister such envy. She stood near the window, in front of the dresser, admiring her new dress.

Hearing the children's voices, she went to the window and looked out. Down through the branches of the old apple tree she could see the two little heads bent over their sewing. She saw the dolls and their stiff smiles. Unconsciously, she listened to the little girls as they talked.

The next day Ruth and Grace were sitting, as usual, under the old apple tree with their dolls.

"I don't like the sewing today, Ruthie, let's play house. This side of the tree can be your house, an' I'll have the other side. Now, I must go home an' get my house ready for you to come an' see me. Come, Marie."

"Gracie, your mamma's calling you."

"All right mamma. You stay here, Ruthie. I'll come right out again."

She hurried into the house and up the stairs, calling, "What do you want, mamma?"

"Alice has something for you, dear."

She opened the door and looked in to her sister's room. Alice stood there smiling. "Let's take off this old dress, Gracie, and try on something else."

"Oh, Alice, that can't be for me! A new dress! Why, I thought you were going to have them all. Oh, isn't it lovely. It's just beautiful. Don't you think it's lovely, mamma?"

She danced about the room, hugged Alice, hugged her mother, looked in the glass, and then ran to the window. "Oh, Ruthie, Ruthie, come up here, quick. I've got a new dress, an' new shoes, an' stockings, an' a hat, an' a coat, an' everything!"

THE MARKETS

CORN AND HAY PRICES MAKE A JUMP UPWARD

The price of corn and hay on the local markets made a jump upward Monday morning, corn bringing ninety and ninety-one cents a bushel, a raise of three cents and hay selling for $14 and $15 a ton, a jump of three dollars. The advance in price may be accounted for by the fact that the receipts were small and bidding was very lively. Only five loads of hay appeared while the receipts in corn at the city scales was only two loads.

Millers and grain dealers of this city are of the opinion that the farmers in the vicinity of Fort Wayne are dissatisfied with the price on wheat and are refusing to sell the grain at a dollar a bushel. The receipts have been very low for the past three weeks and there seems to be no chance that the price will go up, consequently no wheat on the market. Wheat may advance in price this winter but never again do grain dealers expect to see the price soar up to $1.65 as it did last year.

Two loads of old oats that were weighed at the city scales Monday brought 57 cents a bushel while the price on new oats remained the same. Eleven loads brought prices varying from 35 to 45 cents a bushel. All other market were inactive.

CHICAGO GRAIN AND PROVISIONS

Chicago, Aug. 30.—A rush of buying from the short side lifted wheat ¼c to 1c higher today at the opening with September at 97¾@98¼c and December at 95½@96¼c. Large holders let go freely for profit taking and the market soon receded, the reaction amounting to a range of ¾c to 1¼c. The market seemed to be a speculative one with little outside influence.

The close was weak at a net loss of 2c to 2⅛c with September at 95¼c and December at 93½c.

Corn at the start showed an upturn of ⅝c to 1⅛c on reports of frost in Nebraska and Iowa, killing frost being reported from near Mason City, Iowa. September opened at 74⅜@75c; an advance of 1c to 1⅛c and December at 64¼@64⅝c, a rise of ⅝c to 1⅛c. Heavy offerings caused a recession of nearly a cent after which there was a slight rally.

The close was easy, a shade higher to ⅝c lower; September at 73½c and December at 63½@63⅝c.

Oats followed other grain in an early rise and then eased off.

THE DAY ON WALL STREET.

New York, Aug. 30.—Trading in war shares and kindred specialties at variable changes from last week's close was resumed at the outset of today's operations. The main feature was Texas company, which soon rose 6½ to 157, with a net gain of point for Mexican Petroleum at 86½. Coppers were again prominent, Tennessee gaining two at 58. Fertilizers added two points to recent advances. Crucible Steel was reactionary, losing two points to 74. United States Steel declined a reaction in the initial dealings, but soon advanced to 77, a gain of ⅜ over Saturday's final price.

The market broadened later, a demand for railway issues causing general strength. Union Pacific was the potential leader, advancing 1⅜ to 125⅝. New York Central rose 1¼ to 91¾ and Canadian Pacific, New Haven, Erics and Southern Railway preferred participated substantially. The Mexican situation was again reflected in the oil stocks, California Petroleum preferred rising 3 to 43½. Irregular tendencies developed in the war group, some receding 1 to 2 points while others rose vigorously.

Most gains were cancelled in the final hour, the entire list declining under moderately heavy offerings. The closing was heavy.

BEANS CRAWFORD TO STATE PENAL FARM

Familar Police Court Figure Will Spend 140 Days There.

"I don't care; it will be a good thing for me. I can't cut the booze around here and maybe I can get away from it down there. It doesn't fuss me a bit to have that handed to me."

That was what Eugene Beans Crawford delivered by way of valedictory in his cell at police headquarters after Judge Kerr had tagged him $100 and costs and thirty days at the state penal farm on his plea of guilty to public intoxication with three previous convictions, Monday morning. Crawford was picked up drunk Sunday by the police. He has been a familiar figure in the city court for many years and has been arrested and sent to jail so many times the count has been lost. A few weeks ago he was in and on a promise to take the pledge and keep sober he was allowed to go, with the court's promise that his next appearance would get him a term down on the plantation.

Brawlers Are Fined.

William Schulte was fined $20 and costs and Edward "Butch" Skelton drew $10 and costs on charges of disorderly conduct and Noah Weber was acquitted on a similar charge Monday morning in the city court. The arrests grew out of a miniature riot at the Burnett sales stables on Wells street Saturday afternoon following trouble Schulte had with Weber over a horse that Schulte had purchased at auction and later discovered had the heaves. He wanted Weber to take the horse back and refund the purchase price, which Weber refused to do. Outside the stables a fight was started in which clubs and stones were said to have been used. Officers Paul, Kintz and Goeglein arrested Weber, Schulte and Skelton, but a companion of Schulte's got away. Weber suffered most severely in the battle. Both men who were found guilty paid their fines.

They Used Beer Bottles.

James Tinsley, a ditcher, and E. Seckman, who seems to be little of anything, were arraigned in the city court on charges that grew out of a fight in rooms above the Poirson saloon, 504½ Calhoun street, Saturday night, in which both used beer bottles and in which Tinsley goth his head badly cut and battered. Both were drunk and each blamed the other for the trouble. On charges of disorderly conduct Tinsley was fined $5 and costs and Seckman drew a like amount for assault and battery. Both settled.

"Preacher's" Story Frazzles Out.

A man who gave the name of George Wilson and who following his arrest gave out a sad story of his downfall from a high place as a minister of the Presbyterian church, cut all the romantic trimmings from his story when he was arraigned and said that he had been employed in a St. Louis hospital and had once studied for the ministry. He at first told of holding prominent highly-paid pastorates in the west and that social drinking had caused his downfall. He was arrested Saturday evening at the Wabash passenger station by Detective Sergeant Joseph Brennan and was very drunk. Judge Kerr fet him go.

Other City Court Cases.

Pete Van Ryn, a Hollander employed as a freight handler, was arrested Saturday on complaint of his wife, who said Peterkin had been loafing and drinking for a week and had removed furniture from their home and taken chickens from their hennery and sold the property to get money to buy drink. He was continued until Tuesday.

Fred Lucie, charged with loitering, and Arthur McKenna, charged with drunkenness, were continued until September 4 under $100 bond each and will be investigated. They were together when arrested Saturday. Lucie had a check book on a bank in Logan county, Kansas.

Charles Meyers, Frank Mowery and Jack Williams, drunks, were turned loose. Other drunks were disposed of as follows: William Slagle, $1 and costs. William Sinclair, $1 and costs; August Hoxall, $5 and costs; Sam Carpenter, $5 and costs; John Dolan, who gets back in jail as soon as he gets out, $5 and costs.

Henry Parfield, a loiterer picked up in Lakeside by Detective Sergeant Peter Junk, was sent to jail in default of $100 bond. He was continued until Tuesday for investigation.

Andy Kiel, charged with exceeding the speed limit, was continued indefinitely.

BREAD THIEVES AGAIN.

The Scherer Baking company reports to police headquarters that sixty loaves of fresh bread left at the Lamke & Lamke grocery, 1436 West Main street, was stolen between 5 and 6:30 o'clock Monday morning.

GERMANY OFFERS AT LAST GREAT CONCESSIONS

TEUTONS LAUNCHING DRIVE UPON GROVNO

Austro--Germans Capture Town of Lipsk by Storm, Forcing Surrender of the Russians There.

Today's War News Given in Summary

Grodno, last of the great fortresses in Poland held by the Russians, now seemed to be the objective of a German drive. Berlin today reports the capture by storm of the town of Lipsk, about 20 miles to the west of the fortress, the Russians being compelled to surrender.

Gen. von Eichhorn has defeated the Russians in a battle east of the Nieman, northeast of the fortress of Olita, recently taken by the Germans, capturing 1,600 prisoners and seven cannon, the German official statement announces. The defeat by Field Marshal von Mackensen's troops of Russian forces which made a stand south of Kobrin while retreating in the marshy districts east of Brest-Litovsk, is reported.

German trenches at several points in the Argonne region were seriously damaged late on Sunday by the explosion of mines and the pounding of the French artillery according to today's official report.

The sinking of the British steamer William Stephenson of Newcastle, a 1,500 ton vessel presumably after having been torpedoed by a German submarine, is reported from London.

Berlin, Aug. 30.—German forces have made a further advance on the Russian fortress of Grodno, the only one of their fortified positions near the German border which still remains in their possession.

Official announcement was made here today of the capture by storm of Lipsk in northern Russian Poland, about 20 miles to the west of Grodno. The statement follows:

"There are no special incidents to report from the western theater of war.

Eastern Theater of War.

"Army group of Field Marshal von Hindenburg:—The troops of Gen. von Besseler are stationed in the region surrounding the bridgehead south of Friedrichstadt. In the Nieman the army of Gen. von Eichhorn reached a point northeast of Olita: An additional 1,600 prisoners and seven cannon were captured. In the direction of Grodno the town of Lipsk, on the Bohr river, was taken by storm and the enemy forced to surrender. The eastern border of the forest directly east of Bialystok has been reached at several points.

WILL SOON CALL A PEACE CONVENTION

Washington, Aug. 30.—Villa and Zapata, agents here, said today that a peace convention soon would be called in neutralized territory in Mexico, to set up a provisional government. Independent Mexicans yet unaffiliated with either factions would take part, they said, and it was possible the Pan-American conferees would be asked to arrange the details. The Villa and Zapata adherents announce their intention of proceeding without Carranza, if necessary.

BRYAN HERE FOR AN HOUR

Former Cabinet Premier in Fort Wayne En Route to Hillsdale.

Refuses to Comment on Renomination of President Wilson.

William J. Bryan, ex-secretary of state, spent an hour in Fort Wayne, Monday morning, coming to this city by automobile from Winona Lake, where he spoke Sunday, and leaving at 11:30 o'clock over the Lake Shore for Hillsdale, Mich., where he was scheduled to speak Monday evening. He had lunch at the Anthony hotel before taking his departure.

Mr. Bryan said he was devoting his time in the interest of his peace propaganda and that he was never more hopeful than at the present time that this country would settle all the pending differences with the belligerent countries amicably. He declared that the prevailing sentiment throughout the country is for peace.

At the present time Mr. Bryan is making a Chautauqua tour at the conclusion of which he expects to continue his efforts for peace and for strict neu-

MANY POINTS REPORT DAMAGE FROM FROST

Washington, Aug. 30.—Abnormally low temperatures prevailed today over the upper Mississippi and lower Missouri river valleys and the upper lakes regions. In some places the weather bureau reported today the thermometer showed temperatures which made records for the month of August. Frosts were reported in many places. In some instances they were heavy and caused considerable damage to crops. Over almost all of the sections mentioned temperatures were from 10 to 23 degrees below the seasonal average. The cold came down from the Canadian northwest and will spread tonight eastward reaching the Atlantic states tomorrow. Frost was predicted as probable tonight in Michigan and northern and central Indiana and Ohio.

ONE CHARGE AGAINST GIBSON STRICKEN OFF

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 30.—Henry H. Hornbrook, who was selected as special judge in the James H. (Bud) Gibson case, involving an indictment charging violation of the primary law in the Eighth precinct of the Third ward, May 5, 1914, today sustained a motion to nolle prosse the indictment.

The motion was made by Alvah J. Rucker, prosecuting attorney, who announced last week, when Gibson entered a plea of guilty to the conspiracy charge, that such action would be taken.

The indictment as to Frederick H. Cochran, who was indicted with Gibson, still stands. Gibson and Cochran were clerks in the Eighth precinct of the Third ward at the primary election.

Concessions in Enforcement of British Order in Council.

AMERICAN TRADE WILL BE GAINER

Wilson Abandons Vacation Until the Diplomatic Skies Clear.

Washington, Aug. 30.—Concessions in the enforcement against American commerce of the British order in council were announced today as a result of informal negotiations just completed by the foreign trade advisers of the state department.

The British ambassador, Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, assured the trade advisers that their informal representations in cases where the British orders have caused "undue hardships to American commerce will receive special consideration."

Before June 15 the British authorities declined to enter into informal negotiations with the trade advisers in any cases. The British note dealing with the detention of the American steamer Neches, however, on July 31, set forth that in cases where "hardship may be inflicted on citizens of neutral countries" the British government would examine the facts in a "spirit of consideration for the interests of neutrals."

NORMAN DASCOMB DIES SUDDENLY AT TOLEDO

Norman Dascomb, until a month ago a resident of Fort Wayne but recently of Toledo, died at the St. Vincent's hospital in that city Monday morning at 12:15 o'clock following an illness of but two days' duration. Saturday evening he took sick with a high fever and his grandfather, T. A. Wilkinson, of Rivermet avenue, with whom he made his home, was notified and he went to his grandson's bedside. The telegram announcing his death was received Monday morning.

The deceased was 22 years of age and was born and reared in Fort Wayne, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Dascomb. He left Fort Wayne a month ago and later secured a position with a Toledo automobile concern. The mother is now employed in a state institution at Faribault, Minn.

The body will arrive in Fort Wayne at 7:30 o'clock Monday evening via the Wabash railroad. Arrangements for the funeral will be made at that time.

Billy Sunday Talks to Bowser Employes

"Billy" Sunday made a plea for men—Christian men—before 2,500 people at the plant of the S. F. Bowser & Co., Monday afternoon.

"Be a man, not a mute, a mollycoddle, a false alarm or excess baggage," he pleaded.

Mr. and Mrs. Loren G. Jones, who were here during the Lyon evangelistic campaign last winter, were present and assisted in the music.

The famous evangelist spoke from the text: "Be Strong and Show Yourself a Man." He said that God thought more of making man than He did in making the earth because he devoted more chapters in the Bible to telling of it.

"The Lord is no respecter of persons but he is a respecter of character," Sunday continued. "You can no more hide character than fire in gun powder or gasoline. A fool may look as though he has character, but when he opens his mouth it's all off."

Christian Men Needed.

Sunday made an earnest plea for better men—men who can do something worth while and who will take a stand for the right at any cost. "A dead fish will drift with the tide, but it takes a live one to go against it," he said. He declared that God is calling loudly for valiant, Christian men.

Rev. Sunday was introduced by S. F. Bowser. The evangelist was given a tremendous ovation as he arose to speak, and it was some little time before he could proceed.

"I told Bowser I'd speak to his employes, but I think he has run in a lot of 'ringers,'" he said glancing over the audience. He said that everywhere he goes he is reminded of Fort Wayne, by the products that are manufactured here and which are world famed. He referred to the Wayne knit hose, electrical goods made at the plants of the Fort Wayne Electric works and General Electric and of the famous Bowser tank.

One of the big features of the meeting was a duet by Mr. Jones and Patrolman Frank Wilmoth, who was converted during the Lyon meeting.

Announcement was made by Mr. Bowser that he had arranged for three more meetings this year.

ALL WEARING TAGS OF IDENTIFICATION

French Liner's Passengers Labeled in Event of Submarine Attack.

New York, Aug. 30.—Passengers arriving here today aboard the steamer Espagne from Bordeau wore identification tags issued to them before sailing so that they might be identified in case German submarines should send their ship to the bottom while they were passing through the war zone. It was the first time that such tags had been worn by passengers aboard a liner reaching here from Europe since the war began.

To escape submarines the Espagne sailed at 2 o'clock in the morning shortly after the sinking of the Arabic had become known. Her officers and passengers were apprehensive of their own fate and to make identification possible in case of disaster the company listed their names and gave each person a tag to be worn on the way across. The trip however was without special incident.

Among the passengers was Dr. C. Burns Craig of the New York Neurological institute, who had been ten months in Paris studying the effect of constant firing on the nerves of soldiers. Dr. Craig said that the whine of rifle bullets was apparently not harmful to the nervous systems of the men in the trenches as they soon became accustomed to it, but that the crashing of big guns had a very serious effect as the sound shattered the nerves and made some men insane.

AERONAUT KILLED IN FALL OF 225 FEET

George Williams Meets His Death at Farmers' Picnic Saturday.

In attempting to avoid alighting in some trees Saturday evening, George Williams, twenty-one years old, an aeronaut residing at 1910 Pine street, fell to his death while making an ascension at the annual picnic of the Sheldon Farmers' Equity exchange, two miles north and half a mile east of Sheldon.

Williams had ascended into the air for a distance of about 5,000 feet and was making the descent in his parachute when the accident occurred. He was about 225 feet from the ground when the wind blew him across a grove of trees. Robert Williams, a brother, who was following him across the fields, yelled to him to avoid the trees. He answered that he would and immediately unstrapped himself and hanging on with his hands started to swing. His brother believes that he swung too far, losing his hold on the handle bars. His brother was the first to reach him. He was still breathing, but only lived a few minutes. His neck had been broken.

Williams was an experienced aeronaut and had made a number of ascensions. The ascension Saturday was witnessed by about 1,000 spectators. The balloon was the property of William Crowl.

The deceased had been a resident of Fort Wayne for the past two years, coming here with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Simon Williams, from Eaton, Ind. He was employed as punch hand at the Fort Wayne Electric works. Williams is survived by his parents, six brothers and one sister, all living in Fort Wayne with the exception of one.

The body was taken to the residence on Pine street Monday afternoon where friends may view it. No services will be held but the body will be shipped to Glenwood Wednesday morning at 7 o'clock and services held at that place.

KIL-SO-QUAH'S DEATH IS BELIEVED NEAR

Roanoke, Ind., Aug. 30.—Kil-So-Quah, the aged Indian princess and last of the royal line of the Miami nation, is believed to be near death at her home a short distance from here. She was in a state of delirium Saturday night and Sunday and is reported to be sinking rapidly. But so long has she lived—105 years—with rheumatism and infirmities of age combining against her in recent years, that no one would venture to say she has only a few hours to live. For hours she talked and laughed, but speaking only in the Miami tongue, there was none but her son, Anthony Revarre, to understand her and he has not translated any of the talk during delirium. No doubt if her utterances could be written down they would make a deeply interesting bit of biography of the aged Indian princess, especially if her mind goes back to the early days of her life, to the great Chief Little Turtle, her grandfather, on whose knee she often sat, and to the many phases of Indian life she must remember.

NEXT SATURDAY'S SENTINEL

Big German Drive in West Expected to Follow Completion of Effort Against Czar.

London, Aug. 30.—Reports from the eastern front indicating that the Austrians and Germans are engaged in an effort to clear the last corner of Galicia still held by their opponents, have excited great interest here. The Russian lines on the upper Bug and the Zlota Lipa have been pierced, but it is not yet clear how serious a resistance is being offered to the vast enveloping movement from the south.

Having lost Brest-Litovsk, Grand Duke Nicholas cannot afford to hold the river positions in the south in the face of an important movement for to do so would endanger his armies. The opinion is ventured by some English critics that this latest move may conclude for the present the great offensive effort against the Russians which has been in progress since May and that once Austrian soil is cleared of the invaders a new campaign may be undertaken by the Teutonic forces, this time in the near east. In support of this theory is cited the report that the central powers are massing troops near the Rumanian border.

The week-end witnessed violent and almost continuous activity on the part of the artillery of the allies all the way from the North Sea to the Vosges. There are no indications, however, that this expenditure of big gun munitions is being followed by infantry attacks.

London is again awaiting official reports from the British or French authorities concerning the campaign at the Dardanelles where according to Constantinople, heavy fighting is under way.

CRASH OF ARTILLERY.

Big Gun Fire is Violent Along West Front Sunday.

Paris, Aug. 30.—Violent artillery fighting took place yesterday evening at many points in the Argonne district, as a result of which the trenches of the Germans were seriously damaged, according to the French official report this afternoon.

The text of the communication follows:

"Yesterday evening saw severe artillery fighting accompanied by the explosion of mines and engagements with bombs and hand grenades, at a large number of positions in the Argonne. The trenches of the enemy were seriously damaged at Courtes Chausses, Meurissons and at Bolante.

"The advent of night brought relative quiet to this region, as well as on the rest of the front."

WIN 8-HOUR DAY FIGHT

Hundreds of Bridgeport Factory Workers Go Back to Tasks.

SHORTER HOURS AT SAME WAGES

But Alleged Grievance at Remington Arms Plant is Unsettled.

Bridgeport, Conn., Aug. 30.—Many hundreds of factory workers who had been on strike recently returned to their accustomed tasks today, their differences with employer over hours and compensation having been adjusted. In nearly every instance the workers have entered upon the eight-hour schedule, without a reduction in wages. The largest delegation of returning employes was that of upwards of 800 at the Crown and the George C. Batchellor corset companies.

At a meeting of employes of the Alt's Textile company, where 1,500 are out and the plant is closed for two weeks, announcement was made today that work for 150 weavers and slashers can be obtained elsewhere. No one signified a willingness to leave the city. The strikers are confident of winning a shorter workday and changes in the shop system.

A conference will begin today to discuss the question of ordering a general strike against the Remington Arms and Ammunition company because of alleged discrimination against workers in one trade and the discharge of four men who served on a shop committee. The conference will include T. M. Daley, national president of the Metal Polishers, Buffers, Platers, Brass and Silver Workers of North America; W. H. Johnston, national president of the Machinists; John Hines, national president of the Sheet Metal Workers' union, and officers of other unions who have been active here recently.

Plans for the campaign for an eight-hour day to be opened in New Haven this week and later at Waterbury and Hartford will be considered.

The alleged grievances at the Remington plant relate to the polishers who claim they were promised an advance in wages. They formerly received $1 per hundred for polishing bayonets and gun barrels, but claim that when the eight-hour schedule was adopted their wages dropped to 80 cents per hundred.

Four men refused to accept the new scale and when they protested they were discharged. The union in appealing for assistance asked that all the metal workers in the plant be called out.

The number of plants at which there are strikes today number thirteen.

RESERVE SCOUT FLEET.

Chicago Yachtsmen Want Power Boats on Lakes Organized.

Chicago, Aug. 30.—Mayor William Hale Thompson and Commodore James A. Pugh, of the Chicago Yacht club, will soon leave for Washington to lay before the federal government a plan to organize the power boats on the Great Lakes and elsewhere into a reserve scout fleet for volunteer service at the call of the nation, it was announced today. The plan contemplates that officers and crews, estimated to total 300,000 men, are to be trained in the use of rapid-fire guns, torpedo tubts, wireless and other signaling equipment. A government submarine for Chicago waters for practice with the local fleet of 200 power boats will be urged.

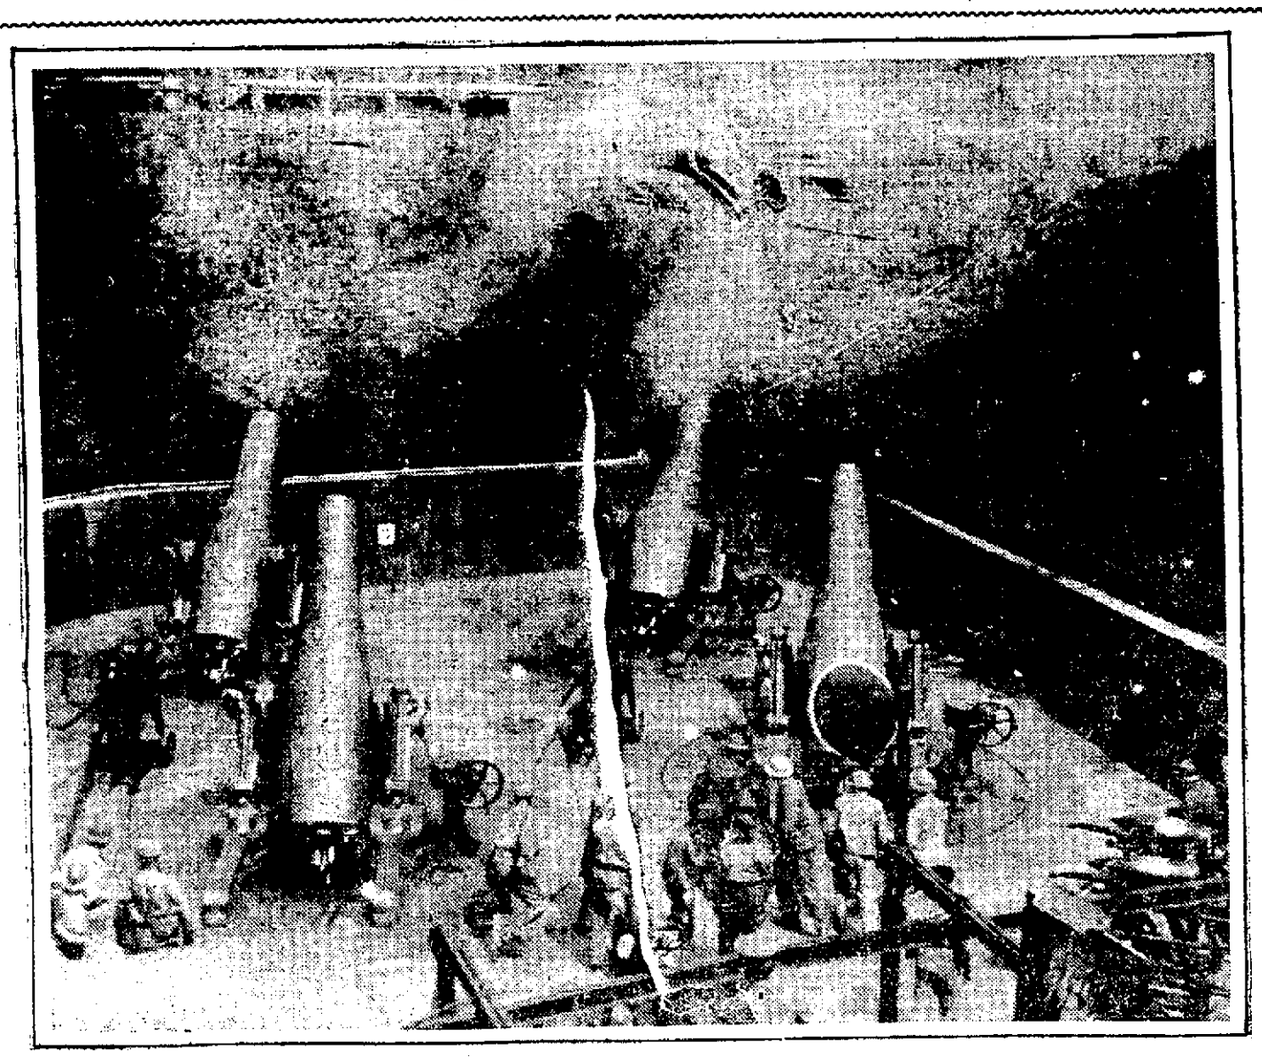
"THE STORE THAT DOES THINGS"

WHAT THESE COAST DEFENSE GUNS CAN DO PROVIDED THE ENEMY IS FOOLISH ENOUGH TO GET WITHIN SEVEN MILES.



These squat, black-mouthed guns (12-inch mortars) at Fort Totten, L. I., were tried out against an "enemy" ship (canvas target.) The officers in charge say their 1,000-pound projectiles would have sunk an invading battleship if she had been where the target was. As the target was stationed seven miles from the guns, and all foreign dreadnaughts have guns shooting much farther, the battleship of the invader "should worry" about seven-mile guns! Shooting these guns off 18 times cost Uncle Sam $1,400.

HAS CONFESSED TO $500,000 SWINDLE

Dual Life of Arkansas City Banker Disclosed by His Arrest.

St. Louis, Aug. 30.—After maintaining for years a dual identity of banker and prominent citizen of Forest City, Ark., and an alleged forger of realty documents in other parts of the country, John W. Kline, of St. Louis, was under arrest here today. He has confessed, according to the detectives, to swindling for more than $500,000.

As a bank director in Arkansas City Kline was known as John W. Barnhardt. He had been urged to become a candidate for the state senate. His family were socially prominent. Kline was arrested here last night. He had escaped for two weeks ago, the police said, from Waukesha, Wis., where his methods in attempting to mortgage property brought him under suspicion.

The hundreds of complaints against Kline charging that he went into a rich farming community, inquired for a good farm which he might buy and get acquainted with men of money. When he had selected a farm, it was charged, he either borrowed the deed and made out a bogus deed to himself or he bought the farm, paid for it by check and took possession of the deed. As soon as the deed was safely recorded in his name Kline, his accusers say, mortgaged it and by the time the check was returned marked "no funds" he had gone back to Arkansas to become a banker again. The police say Kline is worth more than $350,000.

FORTY-TWO TONS OF ENGLISH GOLD HERE

New York, Aug. 30.—Forty-two tons of gold, worth nearly $20,000,000, and securities valued close to $25,000,000, were in the vaults of the United States sub-treasury today to help pay for Great Britain's huge purchases of war munitions. The gold and securities arrived yesterday from London, via Halifax, consigned to J. P. Morgan & Co., purchasing agent for the British government. The gold was American coin, which had been shipped to England in years of trade indebtedness by this country to England and the securities were all American issues.

This shipment, it is estimated, brings the grand total of gold and collateral sent here by and through Canada to $172,000,000 since the beginning of the war. During the said period, however, about $90,000,000 was sent from New York to the account of the bank of England at Ottawa, but this was in the early months of the war, before the trade balance shifted to this side of the Atlantic.

Cashier H. C. Miller resumed work at the Wabash freight office this morning after a vacation.

Noble will purchase the old Ninde building at the northwest corner of Berry and Harrison streets from Charles Goodman for a consideration said to be in the neighborhood of $90,000. The property is one of the oldest business corners in the heart of the city. The building fronts fifty feet on Berry street and 150 feet on Harrison street.

COPS MUST ATTEND COLLEGE.

New Requirements of Policemen in California City.

Berkeley, Cal., Aug. 30.—Policemen of Berkeley are required to attend the University of California, it was announced today. This, it is believed, was the first time any city in the world has made preparations to have a "college bred police department."

The course of study is in the relation of mental disease to criminology.

The theory is that the policemen will be enabled to "size up" a man arrested for a crime and ascertain just what other crimes he might have committed.

Besides the wife he is survived by three daughters—Mrs. John Hall, of Ossian; Mrs. Mary Whitman and Mrs. Ray Ditton, of this city.

There is not a boy or girl in the city, therefore that cannot go to Robison Park on Romp Day. A sandwich and a nickel in your pocket is all that is necessary. So skirmish around and earn the nickel some way. Ask Aunt Mary or Uncle John or the neighbor who has no boy or girl if you can do something for them. Tell them all about Romp Day, about the big candy treat and the big day of fun at Robison Park. Say that you want to go so badly, then ask them to go along with you.

ALL WILL RECOVER.

No Fatalities Will Result From Accident Near Bluffton.

Bluffton, Ind., Aug. 30.—All the persons injured Saturday evening when a north bound C. B. & C. gaso-electric car hit an automobile at Bracey, will recover, was the statement given out by the physician last night. Two of the six occupants were not injured. They were Perry Weigle of Kokomo, and Harry Johnson, son of Mrs. Nellie Johnson.

The injured were:

Mrs. Nellie Johnson, of Travisville—Concussion of the brain, and in a serious condition.

David Johnson of Travisville—Nose broken and back bruised.

Mrs. David Johnson—One rib on left side broken, and severe bruises.

Mrs. Perry Weigle—Bruised bandly and suffering from operation for gall stones, from which she had not fully recovered.

Internal injuries were feared for a time, but this danger is thought to have passed. Mrs. Weigle was not fully conscious last night, and has not been since the accident.

The C. B. & C. car was running about eighteen miles an hour, according to F. C. Smith, of Huntington, the motorman. He estimated that the automobile was traveling east on the road at thirty miles an hour. The driver could not see the on coming car until almost on the trucks, a cornfield in the southeast corner of the crossing obstructing the view.

At the age of two years they came to Indiana and settled down in Smith township where the deceased had been a life-long resident. Death came at the age of 72 years, 1 month and 26 days. This is one of the largest oats yields reported in this county for some years and Mr. Trumbull has reason to be proud of his crop. From the fifteen acres he harvested 1,215 bushels. Ray Vance who lives on the Henry Reece farm in Washington township, threshed 1,801 bushels from thirty acres of land or an average of sixty bushels to the acre. On the ten acres first threshed he had an average of seventy-four bushels to the acre.

Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

Few medicines have met with more favor or accomplished more good than Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. From a small beginning its sale and use has extended to all parts of the United States and to many foreign countries. Everywhere it has received unstinted praise. We confidently believe that it has relieved more pain and suffering and saved the lives of more people than any other one preparation in use. One or two doses of it is enough to relieve an ordinary attack of colic and diarrhoea. It has been used in many epidemics of dysentery with perfect success. It is especially valuable for summer diarrhoeas in children. Every family should keep it at hand as attacks of cholera morbus often result fatally before medicine can be procured or a physician summoned. Obtainable everywhere.—Adv.

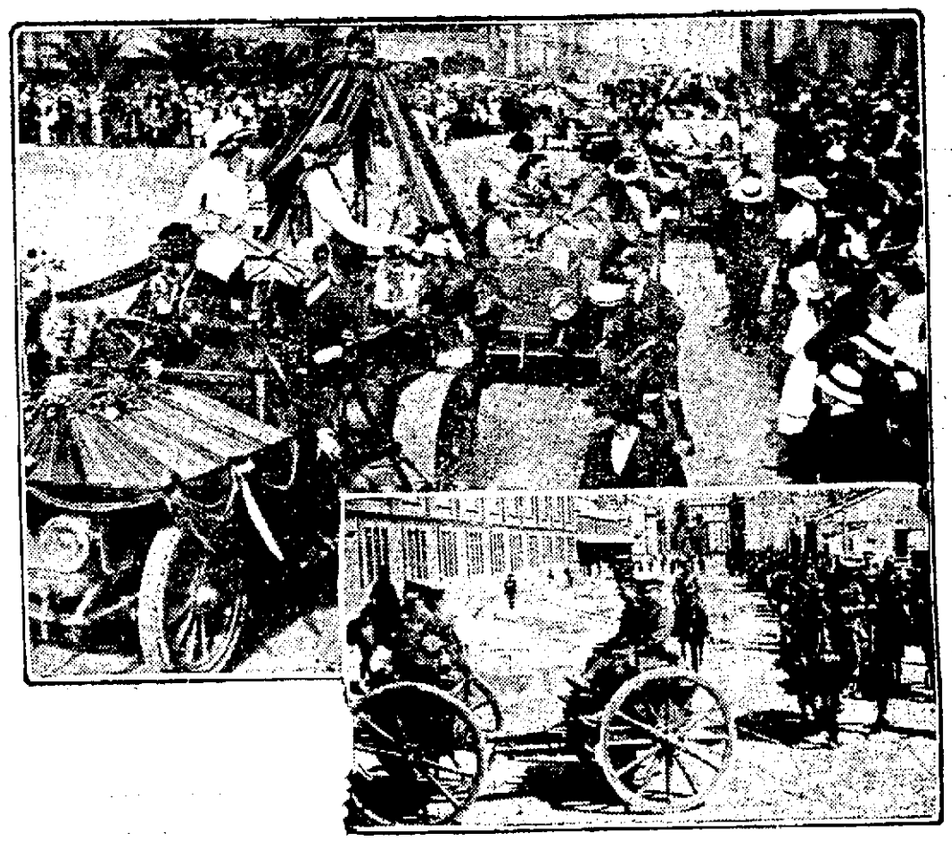
WAR HAS BECOME POOR MAN'S BURDEN IN AUSTRALIA.



(BY ADELE HOWELLS.)

Sydney, Australia, Aug. 30.—The war has become the poor man's burden in Australia. Of the several hundred recruits daily required to reinforce the troops at the Dardanelles and in France, the majority come from the poorer classes.

Fathers and mothers are sacrificing everything to send their sons to the front.

Wives are cutting down expenses to practically nothing so that their husbands can fight for king and country.

The clothes required by the soldiers are a heavy load for poor parents, in spite of the money which the soldiers receive as wages and the assistance given by the Red Cross society. The present rise in foodstuffs and materials for wearing apparel may prove to be the straw that breaks the camel's back.

Eggs, butter and sugar have more than doubled in price. In Sydney, only three pounds of sugar for each person is allowed to be sold at one time. Butter is often absent from the tables on account of the shortage. The poor man has returned to the USE OF BEEF DRIPPINGS ON HIS BREAD. Wool has also doubled in price. Knitting wool for socks and balaclavers has become very scarce and is often unobtainable for weeks.

The poor man, as well as the rich man, is pouring his money into the coffers that supply the war funds. Clerks, carriers, laborers, cooks, butlers, housemaids and all kinds of servants are adding their "mite" to the cause and trying to make the way easier for the dear ones at the front. They contribute to the thousands of war benefits throughout the country. They give freely their hard-earned pennies for the wounded, the sick and for the Belgians. Nearly everyone has some one to look out for.

Although recruiting is going on with astonishing rapidity, the police have taken the names of every unmarried man between the ages of 18 and 60 in the country. The next list will contain the names of the young married men. This measure is looked upon as the forerunner of conscription. The enlistment requirements have been lowered. Men are now accepted between the ages of 18 and 45, minimum height, 5 feet 3 inches, with chest measurements of 33 inches. The rates of pay per day are: For lieutenants, about $5; for sergeants, $2.50; corporals, $2.25; privates, $1.50. Married members receive in addition a separation allowance for wife living at home of about 75 cents a day; for each child under 16, 12 cents per day; for a mother who is dependent for support, 35 cents per day.

Romp Day!

One more day of romp and frolic,
One more day at Robison park;
One more day of merry-making,
Happy as a meadow lark.

Hear the children's merry laughter,
See their happy blissful smiles;
Turning earth into a heaven,
Making life to all worth while.

Boys you'll see with looks so earnest,
While others wear a great big grin;
Happy for a rare occasion,
That a trophy they might win.

Girls whose faces are all sunshine,
Happy since they are not grown;
Pleased that they are little children,
'Tis the happiest time they've known.

Could we but forget the milestones
We have passed along our way,
And again be little children,
Romp and frolic for one day.

There is one who'll live forever,
As the children's patron saint,
Who established blissful "Romp Day,"
Nothing will his memory taint.

Let us all be little children,
And enjoy their mirth and glee;
Let us help them in their frolics,
Better children they will be.

'Tis the day that childish laughter
Fills the park with heavenly bliss;
Purity is stamped upon you
By a child's caress or kiss.

THE SENTINEL'S DAILY SCRIPTURE READING.

Mark II 1:1-17.

1 And when they came nigh to Jerusalem, unto Bethphage and Bethany, at the mount of Olives, he sendeth forth two of his disciples,

2 And saith unto them, Go your way into the village over against you: and as soon as ye be entered into it, ye shall find a colt tied, whereon never man sat; loose him and bring him.

3 And if any man say unto you, Why do ye do this? say ye that the Lord hath need of him; and straightway he will send him hither.

4 And they went their way, and found the colt tied by the door without in a place where two ways met; and they loose him.

5 And certain of them that stood there said unto them, Why do ye, loosing the colt?

6 And they said unto them even as Jesus had commanded: and they let them go.

7 And they brought the colt to Jesus, and cast their garments on him: and he sat upon him.

8 And many spread their garments in the way; and others cut down branches off the trees, and strewed them in the way.

9 And they that went before, and that followed, cried, saying, Hosanna; Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord:

10 Blessed be the kingdom of our father David, that cometh in the name of the Lord: Hosanna in the highest.

11 And Jesus entered into Jerusalem, and into the temple: and when he had looked round about upon all things, and now the eventide was come, he went out unto Bethany with the twelve.

12 And on the morrow, when they were come from Bethany, he was hungry:

13 And seeing a fig tree afar off having leaves, he came, if haply he might find any thing thereon: and when he came to it, he found nothing but leaves; for the time of figs was not yet.

14 And Jesus answered and said unto it, No man eat fruit of thee hereafter for ever. And his disciples heard it.

15 And they came to Jerusalem: and Jesus went into the temple, and began to cast out them that bought and sold in the temple, and overthrew the tables of the money changers, and the seats of them that sold doves;

16 And would not suffer that any man should carry any vessel through the temple.

17 And he taught, saying unto them, It is not written, My house shall be called of all nations the house of prayer? but ye have made it a den of thieves.

The Town Exposition

Fall festivals, chautauquas and expositions of various sorts have come to be almost yearly events in many Indiana cities and towns, and their number is steadily increasing. They mark a certain transition from the original fair idea and have doubtless gained much of their popularity from the fact that they may be enjoyed by many small centers in which the organization and operation of a successful agricultural fair would be clearly impossible.

It has remained for Kokomo, however, to take an advanced step by arranging to make its exposition a permanent affair. Two permanent buildings are to be erected at the exposition grounds in that city, and the function—a purely Kokomo exposition—will become a fixed annual event for the city. It will be a function in which all the people of the city are to have a part, and stimulated by the civic pride that is certain to be awakened it can become a pretentious affair with much resultant good to Kokomo. The idea is an excellent one.

The desirability of the average street fair or carnival with imported attractions is always questionable. It is designed to take from the city more than it brings, and there is never resultant benefit to the city which encourages it. No such state of affairs obtains with the home exposition, designed to show creative ability, civic attractiveness and municipal excellence. The value of such enterprises, for instance, as the made-in-Fort Wayne exposition staged here a few years ago can hardly be estimated. It is wholesome and it is clean. It could well stand repetition each year and furnish a most interesting and profitable illustration of what the city is able to do. Something of that sort, we take it, is planned by Kokomo, and the decision to make the exposition a permanent one is still more important. Kokomo is setting an example which might well be followed by other Indiana cities.

Five thousand people homeless as a result of flood along the Arkansas river country ought to mean something to the Fort Wayne citizen who has not yet signed the flood prevention petitions, even with the likelihood of extensive damage rather more remote here than there. The local demonstrations in the spring of 1913 should be accepted as an impressive indication that one never can tell. With an opportunity to safeguard the city against a possible repetition of that inundation, it will amount to almost criminal negligence if we fail to take advantage of it.

The law enforcement and reform league of the Indiana brewers has filed complaints at Indianapolis asking the revocation of the licenses of six saloon men in that city whom it declares are habitual violators of the Sunday closing law. Six isn't many out of the myriad of supposed violators of the liquor laws at Indianapolis, it is true, but it is apparently half a dozen more than the police were able to find, and the discovery must come as a distressing sort of shock to the men who are not only sworn to enforce the law but are making their living drawing pay for doing it.

The third death has just occurred at Valparaiso from poisoning because a mistake was made in serving toadstools for mushrooms to a party of campers five weeks ago. It is becoming increasingly apparent that a good many people who profess to be skilled experts in identifying the harmless variety of fungi ought to be required to undergo a state examination, be placed under heavy bond—and then prohibited from operating at all in order to guard against possibly fatal errors.

Gary's first pest house was stolen and converted into a boarding house, the second was blown up, and the third carried away piecemeal, and the fourth has just been burned by tramps. Almost any community save Gary would begin to be discouraged over the attempt to provide modern improvements by this time, but Gary is going to try it again. The next pest house will be of reinforced concrete construction. It is clear that the word "fail" has been expurgated from all the dictionaries imported into the steel city.

Lord Balfour, of the English admiralty, is out in a statement in which he deprecates the value of the German airship raids from a military point of view, asserting that neither soldiers nor sailors have been harmed by them. It will be noted, however, that Lord Balfour refrains from recommending them as a nerve sedative in these high tension times.

FRIENDLESS BARLEYCORN.

(Kansas City Star.)

Poor old John Barleycorn.

One by one his laurels are falling from him, his friends slipping away—the friends who used to give him their hard earned money just to be in his presence.

Not long ago he was a jolly good fellow. When he entered cares were cast aside, worries forgotten and the world became rosy. Men of prominence in the world's affairs slapped him on the back, called him a good friend and honored him with golden words of poetry.

But John played a losing game—one bound to beat him in the end. Toasts of "Tonight" were drunk with rousing cheers, forgetful of the "tomorrow." But the "tomorrows" came with relentless persistency—and with them came the disillusionment. Employers learned to know the "hangover" look or they were not long employers. Employes learned this, and, bowing to efficiency, quit John.

So now, almost deserted, John slinks in the back door with clothing bedraggled, to drink himself into forgetfulness. One by one his pet savings have succumbed to the same light of reason. Pictures are painted with steadier hands, and poems sung with clearer reason.

"I can drink today and let it alone tomorrow," said one of John's friends. But that friend is dead.

"My boss drinks, so why shouldn't I drink?" asked another friend. But that friend has lost his job. The boss went broke.

"You can't hurt a drunk man," said another, and he fell down a flight of stone steps, got up and reeled toward home. But on the way home he misjudged the speed of a motor car and was killed.

So, almost friendless and alone, John Barleycorn slinks in the back door and drinks to drown the thought of the tomorrow.

Poor John Barleycorn.

BIG TIME ENJOYED AT MOOSE PICNIC

The annual picnic of the members of the Moose lodge at Radert grove, four miles northeast of the city, Sunday, was a grand success in every particular with something "doing" every minute of the day. Of course, the big chicken dinner at noon was the principal feature of the day's festivities, several hundred chickens being used for the occasion. There was no special program, but plenty of amusement was provided for everybody.

Veterans' Day at Robison Park

Labor Day at Robison Park will be Veterans' Day. The veterans of the civil war, the Woman's Relief corps and the Ladies of the G. A. R. will be the special guests. These heroes of ours will march as in the days of old. Their weapons will not be those of war, however, but the flag for which they fought and bled. It will be an inspiring sight to see those Boys in Blue marching again. It will awaken our patriotism. It will cause our hearts to swell with pride. It will enlarge our appreciation of the wonderful heritage they have bestowed upon us. The veterans are our heroes. They fought for us. They sacrificed for us. They willingly gave up all that life holds most dear that Old Glory might live and continue to wave over an united people. They are growing old. Soon they shall have passed on into the Great Beyond. Labor Day shall be their day at Robison Park. We will stand with uncovered heads as they pass by. We will lift up our voices and cheer that they may know how much we appreciate them.

"They are camping near the sunset;
the shadows are growing long.
Just a step across the river, be brave—
my boys—be strong.
Each day the muffled drum and the silent funeral tread
Reminds us that a comrade is numbered with the dead."

"We'll wrap the flag around you boys,
a nation's love and pride.
Will memorize your sterling worth that
time nor death can hide.
In the city of the dead, we'll strew rare
flowers in May.
A nation's love will follow you when
Uncle Sam is old and gray."

Ten Million Women Preparing for a Mobilization of Mercy

Plan Systematic Organization for Relief Work in Event of War — New Phase of National Defense.

(By Kenneth W. Payne.)

New York Aug. 30—The mobilization of mercy! The women's preparedness for war! Ten million American women organized so efficiently for relief work in a military crisis that by merely touching a key in New York the machinery of supplying soldiers' kits, Red Cross garments, hospitals and nurses would be set swiftly in operation throughout the United States!

That is the vast plan now being worked out by a unique group of society leaders of the east, under the leadership of Mrs. William Alexander, of New York, and with the co-operation of scores of women like Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Jr., Mrs. Jay Gould, Mrs. William Rockefeller and Princess Pierre Troubetzkoy and Mrs. Franklin D. Pelton.

The tremendous scheme of the Special Relief society is to keep all the women as effectively prepared in advance for their share in the war as the army is prepared for its work. While President Wilson is silently studying out the questions of military preparedness these women are perfecting their organization for the mobilization of mercy which must co-operate with the purely military branch in war time.

The plan for this organization, mapped out by Mrs. Alexander, is to interest all the women's clubs, sewing societies, committees, etc., in the work all over the country. Every club will be asked to send in its pledge of the work it can best do, of the amount of work that can be expected of it, and of the time it will take to deliver the product.

In the main office of the society on Fifth avenue lists of these clubs will be kept carefully indexed. Addressing the women of America, Mrs. Alexander says:

"We have sample kits for the regular and volunteer soldiers of the United States, and we should like to give you details for the making of these kits. We note with concern the general condition of unpreparedness in the United States and we feel that the women of America should be doing their part in preparing for an emergency. We are therefore endeavoring to enlist the names of the women's organizations in the campaign for an adequate national defense. If our idea of preparedness meets with your approval, kindly send the name of your organization to the Special Relief society, 597 Fifth avenue, New York city."

MRS. WILLIAM ALEXANDER, PRESIDENT OF THE AMERICAN WOMEN'S SPECIAL RELIEF SOCIETY; AND (AT BOTTOM) MISS ELSIE DE WOLFE, AN ACTIVE MEMBER OF THE GENERAL COMMITTEE.

As the lists of these names are accumulated, instructions will be sent out to the volunteers. The sewing circles will be told how best to buy their material, what work they might best undertake. The volunteer nurses will be told how to prepare for hospital service.

Should war break out, Mrs. Alexander hopes to have 10,000,000 women trained and ready instantly to fall into their particular part of the service.

WITH BOTH LEGS OFF VICTIM MAY RECOVER

Frank Tobias, of Warsaw, Meets Frightful Accident in Fort Wayne.

Frank Tobias, the Warsaw resident who lost both legs as a result of falling when he attempted to get upon a Pennsylvania freight train a half-mile west of Ft. Wayne to ride to his home town, may survive the accident. He is now at St. Joseph hospital and Dr. Budd Van Sweringen, who amputated the crushed limbs, says the wounded man has a good chance to recover. One of the limbs was severed just below the hip and the other four inches below the knee.

Nobody saw the accident and Tobias laid at the side of the track some time before he was discovered by Engineer Tourgee on an eastbound train at 6:30 o'clock Saturday evening. The train was stopped, the injured man picked up and brought to the Pennsylvania station, where the police ambulance got him and took him to St. Joseph hospital. Tobias and James Hoover, the latter also of Warsaw, came here ten days ago and a day or two later were arrested for intoxication. Tobias charged Hoover with robbing his pockets of all his money and the charge against Hoover was changed from intoxication to petit larceny and he was fined $5 and costs. The intoxication charge against Tobias was continued indefinitely.

Mrs. Tobias and the children, according to the story of the injured man, have been in Michigan until recently and he was going to Warsaw to meet them. They reside at 322 Cook street, Warsaw.

THIRD DEATH FROM POISON.

Fungi Served for Mushrooms Fatal to Thomas Heard at Valparaiso.

Valparaiso, Ind., Aug. 30.—Thomas Heard, 55, a prominent northern Indiana lawyer, is dead at his home here as a result of eating toad stools which were mistaken for mushrooms. Mr. Heard's death is the third to result from eating the fungi served for mushrooms to a party of campers about five weeks ago. Mr. Heard was prominent in the progressive party. The medical school of Valparaiso university has invited prominent Indiana and Chicago physicians to attend a clinic at which an effort will be made to learn something of the poison which caused the death of Mr. Heard and his companions.

GO AHEAD AND GET A MIRROR.

AUGUSTA ANDERSON.

Los Angeles, Aug. 26.—"Arguments of the prim and prudish, notwithstanding, I say girls should learn how to use their mirror."

A wonderfully pretty girl who doesn't seem to have the slightest need of "primping up" or "touching up," to make herself presentable, made this assertion as she leaned across toward her mirror and pinned a rose at her throat.

Her name is Augusta Anderson, a girl who has forged ahead until her name is well known among the successful money-makers in the film world.

There is no harm, she advises, in a girl looking her best at all times.

"I know a woman who has at least one mirror in every room and hall of her home. She isn't a vain woman, either. But she believes that if the world, generally, especially women who are prone to screw up their faces and wrinkle their brows over trifles, would cultivate the habit of mirror-gazing, they'd break themselves of any number of grimace habits they now have.

'I'm for her idea. I believe in it, too.

"The mirror, used sensibly, is a better adjunct to beauty than the massage parlor and the beauty doctor. It is a means of prevention while the other is a problematical cure.

"All women won't agree with me, perhaps, but I think they will see the wisdom of the idea if they will take the time to study out the matter as I have done."

Miss Anderson is surely an excellent "ad." for her grimace-cure and wrinkle-banisher. Her face is as smooth as baby's and as pink and white as the proverbial peach.

AT THE MAJESTIC.

"The Lady in Red" at the Majestic Wednesday Evening.

Much is expected of the widely advertised musical success, "The Lady in Red," which comes to the Majestic Wednesday, and Manager Essig promises that none will be disappointed, and here is his argument: "I have in my possession an original program of "The Lady in Red" as it appeared for sixteen weeks at the Geo. M. Cohan Grand opera house, Chicago, and have Mr. Herndon's personal assurance that the cast, chorus and production to be seen here will be absolutely the same. Several of my friends, as well as myself, have seen it in the Windy City and claim it to be the classiest musical play of the season. How could it be otherwise, when one considers that it is interpreted by such splendid stars as Valli Valli, Glenn Hall, Edward Martindel, Gertrude Vanderbilt, Will Philips, Josie Intropidi, George Moore, Henry Vincent, Ann Herndon, George Moore, PhyGis Maude and Lucille Gardiner. While we have had a great many good shows out of Chicago, it is seldom that we get a musical production in its entirety and original form."

Next Thursday is Housewives' Potato Loaf Day.

AT THE NEW PALACE

Gary's public schools long have been the ideal towards which all other systems have struggled. The work being done in the Gary schools of which William A. Wirt is principle now, is being copied by New York's school city. This system has been reduced to movie film form and the results will be projected onto the Keith Palace screen next Wednesday afternoon and evening for the edification of Fort Wayne's public. All persons, including school boys and girls, their parents and all other good citizens will find a wealth of interest in these remarkable films, which were exhibited and won the silver medal at the Panama-Pacific exposition. Samuel J. Brickley, principle of the Froebel school at Gary and for many years associated with Mr. Wirt in his work, will deliver a descriptive lecture in connection with these pictures.

HOUSEWIVES, TAKE NOTICE!

AT THE ORPHEUM.

A VERY IMPORTANT CHANGE.

Orpheum Theater Will Revise Admission Scale and Show Big Features.

Showing "The Vampire" with the eminent emotional actress, Olga Petrova, in the titular role as the opening attraction, the Orpheum theater tomorrow emphasizes a change of policy, made necessary by the incessant demands of patrons, who have long importuned the management to show only feature films. The projection of photoplays possessing the superlative points of "The Vampire," and others of like kind, to musical accompaniments furnished by the Orpheum orchestra, means a combination that is incomparably good.

The appearance of Mme. Petrova, the noted emotional actress, in the creative title role of "The Vampire," as a first-day attraction on the Orpheum screen, is one that could not possibly have been improved upon. "The Vampire" is produced by the celebrated Metro corporation, and tells in five startling acts of the career of a seductively beautiful woman, who embittered at all mankind through the loss of an early love, goes through life luring men to their destruction, and then deserting them, to laugh and mock as they frantically try to regain their former firm foothold on life.

On Thursday and Friday Irene Fenwick, the young actress who scored such a sensational triumph in "The Song of Songs," will be seen in a magnificent picterization of Porter Emerson Browne's "The Spendthrift."

Miss Edith Foster, teacher of Piano and Harmony, announces the opening of her studio for the winter season. 1915-1916. Rooms 215-216 Schmitz Block. Phone 3700.

"PAJAMA GIRL" STILL IN DAME FASHION'S FAVOR.

By Betty Brown.

Almost every girl is a "Pajama Girl" these days, for the girls, especially the younger girls, have found out how comfortable are the bifurcated garments and they're wearing them almost to the exclusion of the frilly and beribboned night robes. There's very little chance for ornamentation on the prim little pajamas, but this season some very pretty ones have been brought out in cotton crepe and in flowered mercerized cotton. The pretty pajamas in which Miss Ruth Cotton of the Heisen Follies de Vogue posed for this picture are made of soft Japanese crepe in old blue with cuffs of Japanese silk. The "frogs" and buttons are of white silk.

AT THE TEMPLE.

THE BLINDNESS OF VIRTUE.

Temple Players Present a Master Dramatic Effort.

A play worthy of all the good things that have been said about it, a play convincing, because of the truth it tells, is "The Blindness of Virtue," the dramatic sermon on sex hygiene instruction by fathers and mothers, written by Cosmo Hamilton and being produced at the Temple this week by the Temple Stock Players. Mr. Harry Manners is cast this week as the vicar whose eyes are opened to the fallacy of permitting girls and boys to discover the secrets of life through the befouled mouths of designing elders, rather than in the sanctity of the home. The vicar wakens to this when he finds his daughter's complete innocence has led her into a compromising situation. That no actual guilt attached to her name was providential, and the vicar casts aside his prudery and sends up a prayer that the mothers and fathers of the world may realize the wisdom of taking their children into a complete understanding. There will be a matinee performance Tuesday.

ASPHYXIATED BY GAS IN BUSINESS PLACE

Lewis Shatzer, Formerly of Fort Wayne, Found Dead at Wabash.

Lewis Schatzer, owner and manager of the Wabash Produce company, at Wabash, Ind., and formerly a well known resident of Fort Wayne, was found dead Saturday in the banana room of his place of business. Death was due to asphyxiation, as the little gas heater which was used to furnish heat so that the fruit would ripen quickly, was found unlighted and turned on in full force. Whether death was accidental or whether it is suicide has not been determined.

While residing in this city Mr. Shatzer was connected with the Baum Commission company, for whom he worked for fifteen years, and while here won the friendship of his associates. He moved to Wabash six years ago and since that time has conducted his own place of business.

The deceased was a member of the First M. E. church of Wabash and was also a member of the Moose lodge of Fort Wayne. He is survived by his wife and three brothers, George, John and Andrew, and one sister, Mrs. Sarah Harding, all of Maine.

Tuesday morning at 11:15 o'clock and Tuesda ymorning at 11:15 o'clock and funeral services will be held at the First M. E. church of this city at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, Rev. D. H. Guild officiating. Interment at Lindenwood.

Since 1873 we have had a style message each season for well-dressed men—a fashion announcement as authcritative in tone for men as the pronouncement of modes for women from Worth and Paquin.

It is a sincere pleasure to us to be able to announce the usual Rabus showing of improved woolens for Fall and Winter. It is gratifying to know that the connections of long standing with the foremost manufacturers abroad have not been severed by the war and that the choice and range of patterns is more exclusive even than in previous years.

The trend of style this year makes tailoring of the Rabus individuality and character a requisite. We would ask you to consider this a cordial invitation to visit our Fall display.

THE SENTINEL'S LIVE SPORTS CRISP RELIABLE

DICK SEES BLACK FUTURE FOR CENTRAL

Grand Rapids Scribe Suggests Anderson, Muncie and Saginaw.

(Dickerson in Grand Rapids Press.)

It is doubtful whether a single team owner or manager of the Central league can tell at the present time what cities will compose the 1916 circuit. There are going to be changes made and the mileage reduced so that there may be some chance of someone besides the players and the railroads profiting by the league's existence. Dayton lost money with a pennant winning team last year and Evansville did little better than break even with one this year.

There is only one way to shorten the mileage of a circuit and that is to drop those cities which are farthest from the center of the circuit. With the Central league it means that either Erie, Youngstown and Wheeling or Evansville and Terre Haute must be dropped. Of the five Terre Haute alone is reported willing to give up franchise rights.

Evansville and Terre Haute go together and without one the other could hardly be afforded by the league because of the mileage. With the two in the league the jump to Evansville is broken. Evansville is one of the best crowd-drawing towns in the league, yet is so far away from the rest of the circuit as hardly to be considered without Terre Haute in the circuit.

Youngstown, Wheeling and Erie are all good baseball towns, but it takes a lot of costly travel to reach them and the magnates of the league will soon be called upon to decide whether it is advisable to go so far east as Pennsylvania and West Virginia for cities when the nearest of the five western towns of the circuit to Erie and Wheeling is several hundred miles away. Wheeling started off drawing fine this year and would no doubt have made a good showing had the Stogies not been outclassed in the race. Back in the early days of the league Wheeling was one of the best towns.

Erie turned out fair crowds this year, yet did not warm up as it has other years. Youngstown turned out fine to the Sunday games there and none too well the other days. Wheeling, Youngstown and Erie are good baseball towns, however.

New Towns That Stand a Show.

Naturally when a league drops some towns it has to take in other towns to replace them if it does not reduce the number of its clubs. South Bend will be one of the first towns to be taken in if the circuit changes. By location and in many other ways it belongs in the Central league. Ed Smith, who has plenty of backing in South Bend, is likely to be at the head of things there next year.

If Evansville and Terre Haute drop out the place of one of them will no doubt be taken by South Bend, Marion, Anderson and Muncie in Indiana, Saginaw, Jackson and Battle Creek, in Michigan are to be considered. Muskegon also stands an excellent chance if the opening presents. If the Sawdust city can have its new downtown park in readiness for the opening of the 1916 championship season and the business men of the town are willing to go behind the team as they should the town has a chance.

The time has come when the Central must make some radical changes or fall by the wayside as many minor leagues did this year. If Terre Haute and Evansville should quit the league and their places be taken by South Bend and Muskegon it would reduce the league mileage by about one-half.

ANNOUNCEMENT

In connection with the announcement of our display of new exclusive Fall and Winter woolens, we also wish to announce the new special department which will be added to our store. Travers Is "Crabby" While Evans Is Confident and That May Decide National Golf Title Meet

(BY BROWN HOLMES.)

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 30. Just about all the golf champions in the United States and nearly any golfer who is much of a golfer at all seems to hold some sort of title are gathered here for the blue ribbon event of amateur golfdom, the national championship tournament.

Of course there are some players who stand out as the greatest of the lot, but these stars say they are in for the hardest test they have ever had. The growing ability of golfers in all parts of the country makes things harder for the leaders every year.

Old psychology is on the job good and strong. Psychology is always important in golf, for it is claimed that a golfer is just about as good as he thinks he is, but this year psychology concerns itself mostly with Jerry Travers and Chick Evans, picked with Francis Ouimet as possible winners.

Travers is usually a smiler, but he has been "crabby" ever since he came here. He has crabbed the weather and everything else and in his preliminary work he was off in his shooting.

Evans is more jovial than ever. Here is a chap who is a problem. He is just about as good as any golfer in the country, but sometimes he is beaten by dubs.

His chances depend upon what Chick Evans thinks of Chick Evans.

Golfers have always said that if Evans could convince himself that he could win the national honor he would go out and win it. But it seems that he has always regarded himself a chronic semi-finalist and he has been left in the semi-finals.

This year Evans seems to have the confidence. Probably it has been brought on by his success in various matches lately.

If Evans has finally convinced himself that he can go out and win that title and if Travers is going to remain "crabby" through the meet there is a mighty good chance that Evans will win the honor for the first time in his many trials and that Travers, present open champion and four-time amateur champion, will be trimmed.

DARSEY TO GET REAL ACID TEST

Australian Wonder to Face Some Fast Ring Men Soon.

Les Darsey, the Australian middleweight who flashed into the limelight by knocking out Eddie McGoorty in 16 rounds, is due for the test that will show just how good is his claim to the middleweight championship.

Jimmy Clabby, the Hammond, Ind., speeder, is on his way to Australia for a match with Darsey and Mike Gibbons, the St. Paul Phantom, is booked to go to Australia as soon as he has finished his $25,000 tussle with Mickey McFarland.

If Darsey can hold his own against Clabby, then against Gibbons, he will be entitled to all the praise that has been handed him lately.

Darsey is touted as a punching wonder. He had to have a punch to put away Eddie McGoorty, one of the strongest men in the ring. Before that he gave Jeff Smith such a beating in five rounds, Smith fouled and was barred from the ring by Australia promoters who were of the opinion that he hit low purposely.

Darsey stacks up well for his match with Clabby. He has beaten Mickey King, who drew with Clabby.

Efforts have been made to get Darsey to come to the United States, but he has chosen to stay in Australia while he is a big favorite there. He figures to make a lot of money in bouts with Clabby and Gibbons before he gives United States fans a chance to see him in action.

BADE MYERS' BEAUTIES GRAB SUNDAY GAME

Kendallville Team Was But Aint—Score Nine and One.

Kendallville is stitting up in bed this morning, possessed of the realization that there's a difference between a crack semi-pro team and a gang of professionals. The Kendallville crew believed firmly up till Sunday that the only reason they hadn't beaten any professionals this year was that they hadn't played any.

Beyers featured the game with a homer and a steal to the plate, Hart performed well in the outfield; Mee, Osborne and Brubaker were heavy stick men, and the whole affair was decidedly one-sided.

YOST ORDERS PLAYERS TO REPORT SOON

Ann Arbor, Mich., Aug. 30.—Invitations to report for football practice were issued today by the athletic association of the University of Michigan to thirty-three players. Coach Yost has decided to again use Ferry field for the initial work, and those favored with invitations have been ordered to report there Sept. 20. Work will begin on the following day. Two or three players whose scholastic standing is at present uncertain may be invited later.

Of last year's squad Coach Yost has selected fifteen men, but three cannot hold places unless they remove scholastic conditions. Of these the most prominent is Tackle Lewis Reimann, who last year promised to become one of the country's greatest linemen. He played in every game, and is a fighting tackle of the most aggressive type.

He was relied upon to bolster up the left side of the line. Others low in their studies are Norton and Whalen, guard and end, both of whom showed flashes of form last year, but were never quite good enough to land a berth.

LINE EXTENDS OVER A THOUSAND MILES

Geographic Society Tells of Russian Defenses in Dreary Land.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 30.—Characteristics of the long tertiary line of Russian defense, to which the Muscovites may retreat in consequence of the German successes south of Courland, and which reaches from the narrows of the gulf of Finland, south, to the Roumanian Danube, are discussed in the last bulletin issued by the National Geographic society. Roughly estimated, this line extends more than a thousand miles crossing plains, lake country, rolling hills, impassable swamps, and through dense forest belts. Almost throughout its whole extent winter is bitter and rigorous. With the German armies able to force the abandonment by the Russians of the Brest Litovsk line and with a continuation of their advance into the vast empire, the battles that are to decide the future fate of Europe may be fought out along this third line of Russian defensive. The bulletin reads:

"Probably the dreariest belt in all Russia is that through which the third line of Russian western defense is traced. This line runs through the middle of the white Russian's country, a land of backwardness and poverty, where an unfavoring nature and a past whose history is full of luckless chance have, alike, proved stepmotherly to the development of the country and its people. The sections of this line of immediate interest are those beginning at Riga, on the Baltic, and following the broad Dvina river to Duenaburg, turning south at Duenaburg and following the railway through Vilna, Lida, Baranovichi, into the trackless swamps of Pinsk and the Pripet river to Rovno, 120 miles east-northeast of Lemberg.

"The northern part of this line is reenforced by a line from Duenaburg, behind Vilna and Lida, which is based upon the marshes of Pinsk. Much of the surface of these marshes would be unfeasible for military operations not undertaken in aeroplanes and dirigibles. There is, however, no other present stretch of railway so favorably situated parallel with the Russian front as the stretch immediately behind the Brest Litovsk line, from Osowiec to Kovel, and that just before the third line, from Vilna, through Lida, Baranovichi, to Rovno. There is one line of rail, running southeast, the Vilna-Minsk-Gomel stretch, and another line from Minsk, southwest, to Baranovichi, and thence by the present outpost transverse line to Rovno.

"More than 200 miles of the line directly below Minsk is through morass and marsh land, whose defense will be little cause of worry to the Russians. A vast part of this water-logged area to the north of the Pripet swamps has been included in great Russian reclamation projects, and millions of roubles have been expended to obtain a proper drainage for the land, whose thick crust of black earth, decayed vegetation, is expected to be among the most fruitful future farm land in the black-earth belt. 'A little more than 100 miles north of Minsk, and reaching past Duenaburg, is a level country, ever and again broken by low swells, whose surface is strewn with such a wonderful maze of lakes as to far outrival the lakes of Masuren-land. The whole region in the center of the line is thickly forested, primeval, formidable forests bristling across many of its sections. Moreover, the whole area surrounding the third line of defense is crossed by innumerable rivers, riverlets and creeks, most of them flowing north and south, mobilizing in the low Pinsk swamp region, and their waters finally finding their way westward into the mighty Dnieper and into the Black sea."

TEACHERS IN COUNTY MEET

ers made a most favorable impression.

Readings are given at each session by Mrs. Almedia B. Waltz, who is a graduate from the dramatic art department of Valparaiso university, and of the Elias Day School of Lyceum, Chicago. Music throughout the institute is being furnished by the Indianapolis Conservatory of Music. On Thursday evening a musical entertainment will be given at the First M. E. church at Wayne and Lafayette streets, by students from the Indianapolis conservatory. The institute Monday morning was opened with prayer by Rev. D. H. Guild, pastor of the First M. E. church.

Monday Afternoon.

At the session Monday afternoon Dr. Hollis spoke on "Silent Suggestions in the Teacher," and Dr. Geisel on "The Home Behind the Man."

While not a part of the institute, the teachers in attendance and others will have an unusual opportunity to gain information concerning the world-famous Gary schools, of which Superintendent William A. Wirt is founder, when motion pictures demonstrating the work of these schools will be exhibited at the New Palace theater along with a lecture and descriptive talk by Samuel J. Brickley, principal of the Froebel, Gary's newest and greatest public school. Mr. Brickley, who exhibits the pictures has been associated with Mr. Wirt in his school work for a number of years.

Before adjournment Monday morning Superintendent D. O. McComb gave a short talk to the teachers, urging them not to fail to enroll. The teachers are requested to attend every session if they wish to receive compensation and credit.

MORE ARMY OFFICERS SOUGHT BY GARRISON

Washington, Aug. 30.—Secretary Garrison has directed the war college to submit plans for securing additional regular army officers and a corps of reserve officers, both for the regular army and for a volunteer army or any other force which congress may authorize. This step was taken with a view of recommendations to congress at its coming session.

Secretary Daniels is also expected to recommend additional officers for the navy regardless of the building program yet to be decided upon. A plan is under consideration by which the number of officers in the navy will be placed on the basis of its tonnage. Under such a system there would be an automatic increase in the number of officers as the number of ships was increased.

Wilson Abandons Vacation.

President Wilson has given up all idea today of further extended vacation this year. He had planned to spend the whole month of September at Cornish, N. H. But his plans now are not to leave Washington until the situation between the United States and Germany clears, if he leaves at all.

The president already has received assurances from official German sources which he hopes will result in solving the controversy with Germany over her submarine warfare. He is waiting, however, for Germany to make formal disavowal of the attack on the Arabic and assurances of safety to Americans on the high seas in the future.

Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, had returned today to the summer embassy on Long Island, satisfied that an amicable understanding would be reached regarding the Arabic tragedy, as well as all other issues with Germany. He probably will not return here pending the receipt by the Washington government of further word from Berlin.

Predicts Democratic Success.

Mr. Bryan is very optimistic as to the future of the democratic party and predicted a democratic victory at the next presidential election.

"The democratic party has certainly earned a verdict of approval," he declared.

The former secretary of state was asked his opinion of Mr. Wilson's renomination for the presidency to which he replied that inasmuch as Mr. Wilson had not discussed the matter himself it was not wise for him to. He had nothing but praise for the president. He made no comment on the controversy between Secretary of War Garrison and Mr. Roosevelt as a result of the latter's recent speech at Plattsburg, N. Y.

Mr. Bryan made inquiry concerning a number of his Fort Wayne friends. Judge S. M. Heuch called at the Anthony hotel and accompanied the distinguished visitor to the Lake Shore depot.

Except that he has aged considerably Mr. Bryan has changed but little since his last visit in Fort Wayne. Mr. Bryan's presence in the city was not generally known.

GILBERT IS RETURNED.

Paris, Aug. 30.—Eugene Gilbert, the French aviator, whose return to Switzerland after his escape from internment in that country, was ordered by the French government, arrived in Berne yesterday, escorted by Captain Dufere, of the Swiss army, according to Havas News agency dispatch today from Berne. The aviator, whose recent escape was said to have been effected after he had withdrawn his promise not to try to get away, was received by the Swiss staff and was informed that he was considered as an officer interned without having given his word of honor.

Gilbert arrived this morning at the village of Hospenthal, where he was interned anew. All the Swiss papers, the dispatch states, declare that a most excellent impression has been created in Switzerland by the return of Gilbert.

State Accounting Board's Report Shows Clean Sheet There.

The state accounting board has rendered its report on the recent examination made by Field Examiners Leonard R. Schrader and James P. Huefling of the accounts in the office of City Comptroller W. C. Bandt for the year 1914. The examiners found that save for a slight confusion of figures in which small sums were not credited to the proper accounts that the comptroller's books were correct. During the year the city electric light and power works offices were in the comptroller's office and its accounts were kept there. The greatly overworked condition of the force led to some errors. Every correction has been made and the books of the finance department balance perfectly.

ALL GOT COLD FEET.

Everybody at the annual picnic of the members of the city council, held Saturday at the Cripple club's grounds on the St. Joe river, north of Robison park, got cold feet except City Attorney Guy Colerick, School Trustee A. L. Randall and Secretary J. H. Gilpin, of the board of health. This was not due to the fact that the scene of some of the diversions was transferred from outdoors, where the murky sky was the limit, to the shelter of a low-browed tent, but because of the dampness of the ground. The three immunes wore rubber soles and otherwise were lucky. A big crowd attended the picnic, there being besides the members of the council, who were hosts, practically all the city officials and their staffs, including Mayor Hosey, who sidestepped a Sunday at his Rome City cottage to share the good cheer of the occasion. Many county officials and men prominent in the politics of all the political parties, save the prohibitionist organization, were guests of honor. County Treasurer J. Herman Bueter modestly uncovered himself as a phenom in performing on a guitar and County Assessor William Eggemann maintained his claim to championship honors pitching horseshoes. An elaborate luncheon was spread and kept spread from noon until the picnic broke up about sundown, because there was nothing else to do. The councilmen proved themselves most hospitable hosts and princely entertainers and were wished by their guests many returns of the day.

TO INSPECT MOTOR EQUIPMENT.

Mayor W. J. Hosey, Members George Hermann, James J. Hayes and Calvin K. Rieman, of the board of safety, and Assistant Fire Chief George Jasper will go to Cincinnati Tuesday, to be present at an exhibit and test of motor driven fire apparatus that is to take place Wednesday, when all the big makers of such fire apparatus will have their machines in the competition. Assistant Chief Jasper will probably remain at the convention of fire chiefs throughout the week. The officials hope to gain some knowledge that will be of value in making purchases of apparatus for engine house No. 1, which is to be completely motorized next year.

BOULEVARD RESOLUTIONS UP.

Provided there should be the presence of a quorum, Monday afternoon, the park board had scheduled for final hearing and confirmation boulevard resolutions, No. 9 and No. 11—the first for the grading of Anthony boulevard from the Maumee river to State boulevard and the other for the construction of sidewalks on the east side of Anthony from Lake avenue to the Maumee river.

NINETEEN CASES OF TYPHOID.

The records of the health department show that for the first eight months of the present year there have been nineteen cases of typhoid fever in Fort Wayne. A large number of these were infections from outside the city. The latest case to be reported is of H. Arnett, 4001 Piqua avenue.

SHOP AND RAILROAD NEWS

H. T. Hogan, W. B. Madara and J. T. Leach Among the Lucky Ones.

A change in the personnel of the foremanship in the Pennsylvania shops which is probably the greatest because of the number of men affected in the history of the plant, has just been announced by Master Mechanic E. E. Griest. It is as follows:

H. T. Hogan, material inspector.

W. B. Madara, machine shop foreman, succeeding Mr. Hogan.

F. H. Schaffer, assistant machine foreman, succeeding Mr. Madara.

J. T. Leach, erecting shop foreman, succeeding E. E. Dildine.

P. A. Meyers, assistant erecting shop foreman.

C. P. Cherry, transferred from division storekeeper to the motive power office as storekeeper.

J. B. Fowler, division storekeeper, to succeed Mr. Cherry.

Henry Zimmerman, of Chicago, assistant division storekeeper, succeeding Mr. Fowler.

A. S. Courtney, transferred to the motive power office as machine tool inspector for the entire Northwest system.

It will be noticed that, with one exception, all the men affected by the promotions are now and have been for several years connected with the Fort Wayne shops. They know all of the employes and all of the employes know them and rejoice in their advancement. Often, when there is a change to be made in foremanship, the man selected is brought from another part of the system or perhaps from another railroad, but in filling the positions at this time Master Mechanic E. E. Griest found just what was needed among the men who have been associated with him in shop work for several years and he advanced them. It was not generally known that changes were to be made and the announcement creates much surprise and the men connected with the works look upon it as an official expression of satisfaction with the manner in which shop work in Fort Wayne is carried on. One of the last official acts of Supt. Otto Schroll before he left for California was to confirm these appointments.

Of the combined service with the Pennsylvania of the men affected by these promotions—148 years—Hugh T. Hogan has one-third of the time to his credit, having been employed in the local shops forty-four years. He is a native of Rochester, N. Y., where he learned the machinists' trade. At the completion of his apprenticeship he came to Fort Wayne in the spring of 1869, but finding no work he made arrangements with the foreman of the Pennsylvania shops to notify him when a place was open, and he went to Chicago, where he found employment in a small shop. A few weeks later he received a letter informing him that a "job" awaited him in the shops of the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago in this city and he returned here and has worked in the shops ever since. The records show that he began as a machinist October 1, 1869, and was appointed foreman of the machine shop in 1890, succeeding Bernard Fitzpatrick, who that year became master mechanic of the Wellsville shops.

W. B. Madara served his apprenticeship in the Wabash, beginning in 1899. Early in 1902 he went to Auburn and for a short time was employed in the gas engine works, returning to Fort Wayne the same year to take employment in the Pennsylvania shops, where he has since been employed as a journeyman machinist, gang foreman, piecework pricemaker and assistant machine shop foreman.

Next to Mr. Hogan, in point of years served, comes Frank H. Schaffer. He began as a laborer in the machine shop in 1892, but during the following eight or nine years acquired a knowledge of mechanics which entitled him to advancement and he became a gang foreman in 1901 and had charge of the wheel lathe department in the machine shop ever since.

John T. Leach began his career at the Pennsylvania shops in the capacity of a messenger in the erecting department in 1900. In 1902 he became an apprentice and at the close of the term worked for awhile as a journeyman machinist. In 1909 he was appointed a gang foreman and two or three years later became assistant foreman of the erecting shop. While in that position he had full charge of the department much of the time, Foreman E. E. Dildine being engaged in inspecting locomotives at the Baldwin aand the Dunkirk works. When Mr. Dildine went to the Eastern division as assistant master mechanic about eight months ago, Mr. Leach became acting foreman of the erecting shop and remained in that position up to the present.

Paul A. Meyers learned his trade in the factory of the Fort Wayne Electric works, later working awhile at the trade at the Bass works. He came to the Pennsylvania shops in 1900 and became a gang foreman in the erecting shop in 1908. Mr. Meyers has spent a good deal of time in the past three or four years inspecting construction work at the locomotive works where the company's engines were built. He is now out on a mission of that kind and possibly has not heard of his promotion.

Charles P. Cherry became material distributer in the storeroom in 1883 and was thus engaged when Enoch Cox, the division storekeeper, died in 1902. Then Mr. Cherry became the division storekeeper and has filled the office since.

John B. Fowler's career with the Pennsylvania dates from 1906, when he took employment in the supplies department of the Allegheny shops. He came to Fort Wayne in 1910, as a clerk in the storeroom, and four months later was appointed assistant storekeeper.

Henry Zimmerman is a Chicago man and is the only one in the list who was not a resident of Fort Wayne when he received his appointment. He is a brother to Paul Zimmerman, storekeeper at the Chicago shops, and has been for some time employed as an assistant in that department.

A. S. Courtney is a native of Boston, coming here to work as a special apprentice in the shops and motive power department in 1905. Since 1909, until a few months ago, he was employed in the machine shop, the greater portion of the time as assistant to General Foreman Hogan. A few months ago Mr. Courtney was called to the motive power department to take up a special work, similar to that which will occupy his attention when he assumes the duties of his new office.

Care of Hands In Summer

BY ANNETTE ANGERT.

IN summer constant care of the hands is necessary for the reason that the hand is exposed to rough exercise and to hot suns and winds. Rowing, especially, subjects the skin to that blistering sunbeam that comes from the reflection of sunlight on water, and the palms of the hands to callouses.

After coming in from any outdoor exercise in which heavy gloves have not been worn, bathe the hands in warm water to cleanse them. Corn meal or oatmeal, mixed with almond meal, is excellent to wash them with, because the meal not only cleanses but softens and soothes the cuticle. Then, if the sun has been very hot, bathe them with vinegar in which a little water has been stirred, and gently rub cold cream or cow's cream into the skin. The hands may then be dusted with oatmeal and wiped off. They will look soft and milky white and feel refreshed.

At night use a lotion on them, or meal and milk, and then cold cream, letting the cream remain on all night. Rub some of the cream into the corners of the nails every night, or every alternate night, to prevent the skin becoming callous at the corners, and twice each day push the flesh down from the nail with an orange stick. Repeat this every time the hands are washed, using a towel for the purpose.

It will be easy to keep the nails in good condition if the orange stick is used frequently, and the file employed every day, keeping the nail corners well rounded. Smooth the edges with an emery board and then soak the finger ends in rain water or distilled water, mixed with glycerine and rosewater. This will soften the nails so that any ragged ends at the corners may be trimmed off with the nail scissors. Never use a sharp instrument to cleanse the nails, for the skin beneath the nail and the nail itself will be roughened and scratched so that it will require a long time to remove the injury and to cleanse the nails afterward.

Where the fingers are really dirty use oil to wash them, wiping it off thoroughly before washing the hands with soap and water. Stains may be removed with pumice stone, lemon juice or, if obstinate, turpentine. After the nails are clean, trimmed and rounded with the file into an oval shape, polish them with pink manicure paste and then with a clean buffer. Five minutes' care of the hands at night, and ten minutes' care of the nails in the morning will save frequent hours of manicuring.

EASY LIVING

Should Be Goal of Women Who Would Always Be Well.

BY LUCILLE DAUDET

A BUSY clubwoman, a woman doctor, a business woman and a schoolma'am, ranging in their ages from twenty-five to forty-five, happened to come together late one afternoon in the room of a sweet old soul who has been a shut-in, and bedridden, for many years.

The old lady, propped among her pillows, looked from one tired face to another, while each of her visitors told how they had hurried in their duties in order to spend a little time with her. She listened sympathetically, and when they had finished, she began in the mildest of tones to read them a little lecture.

"I want you to look at me," she said. "I want you to remember how you have seen me all these years. And I want you to go back a great many years with me and take a lesson from my life.

"You see me a helpless old woman here, and I should be dead now but for my dear children, who carry me on their hands, as it were. But if I had only known long ago how to take care of myself, I would be on my feet now, active and useful, and glad to be living.

"Nobody thought there was any limit to what a woman should do in my day. Our parents started us to work when we were mere babies. When I see my little granddaughter come in from her outdoors play, I think how much better things are now for the little girls. Oh, how we girls had to work! And so much of it was indoor work.

"How well I remember, when I was thirteen years old, one of our neighbor families was taken down with typhoid fever. Five were sick at one time. Neighbors helped each other out in those days. I was only thirteen, but I had to do my share, and I was sent over there to do all the housework and all the washing for that family. I was there three weeks, and when I came home I was sick. My parents were getting ready to go on a long visit, and as they thought I wasn't really sick, they went and left me home with my sister. The next day I was in bed with pleurisy, and, though I got well of that in time, somehow I never really seemed to get real strong again.

"I wasn't taught how to save myself, and I thought it was my duty to never spare my own strength. I married young and went to my husband's farm, where a woman's burdens were even worse, for then the children came—quickly. I can't tell you—I just can't tell you—how I worked. And nobody ever told me different or warned me what I would come to. I saw wrecks of women all around, but I didn't take it to myself.

"So I want you to look at me and take me for an example. I used to think city women wouldn't come to what country women come to. But city women expect too much of themselves, too. Every time I see your faces they look more tired, and though your voices are always kind in this room, I feel they're growing sharper underneath, and when you speak of your work it's always about the hurry of it. You know so much more than the women of my time knew, and you ought to know that women can't stand too much

FOR a bride-elect who will be married in January her bevy of friends arranged to purchase appropriate articles, one for each month of her first year. For January there was a good cook book with all verse apropos the need of just such a book in the household. February is a good month when a woman lives to make fancy work, so the little handkerchief bag was filled with the trifles needed in the work basket. March brought out a fan. Of course April was suggestive of house cleaning, and the kitchen apron, bar of soap and dustpan were very appropriate articles. So these gifts were all cleverly arranged, and while there was not an expensive article among them, they provided a happy surprise.

THE following are different ways in which milk may be prepared for children who dislike to take milk: Beat the yolk of an egg light, add a teaspoonful of sugar and half a teaspoonful of lemon juice; fill the cup with milk, stir well and call the mixture snow lemonade. Heat a cupful of milk, but do not let it boil, sweeten it and flavor with a little cinnamon and pour from a tiny teapot, calling it cinnamon tea. Put a cupful of milk and the white of one egg into a glass jar; add a little sugar, screw down the top of the jar and shake until the ingredients are thoroughly blended; flavor with orange and serve as orangeade. Cocoa made with milk is liked by most children, and is even more nutritious than the milk alone.

ONE may have dozens of hooks in a closet, yet they will not take the place of one long curtain rod placed well back in the closet where skirts can be hung. The skirt hangers with large hooks must be used and dozens of skirts can be hung on this pole and take up so little room that it is remarkable that the idea is so late in making its arrival. Then if the hooks are placed closely together in neat rows, instead of here, there and everywhere, the waists can be placed on neat little paper hangers and hung in orderly rows, and it does not mean hanging several waists on one hook to be overtopped with a petticoat or bolero jacket, all to be taken down when the lower waist is needed. If women learned to properly place hooks in the clothes presses and wardrobes there would be less demand for more dress room.

TO wash corsets, first rip the front seam on both sides and take out the steels. Then dissolve some soap jelly, made by shredding half a pound of the best yellow soap in one quart of boiling water, and simmering until dissolved in warm water. Two tablespoonfuls of jelly to half a gallon of water is usually sufficient, but hard water may require more. Put the corsets into the suds and allow them to soak for five minutes. Then spread them on a board and brush thoroughly with a well-soaped nail brush, dipping them occasionally into the suds to remove the loosened dirt. When clean, rinse through two lots of warm water and hang up to drip dry. When almost dry, iron on the inside with a warm flat iron, and after thorough airing replace the front steels and sew them firmly in. If this is carefully done, the corset will emerge from the washtub as good as new.

IT is impossible to tell whether a color is fast before washing, but by far the safest plan is to "set the colors" before it goes to the tub for the first time. One of the best methods of setting delicate colors consists in simply making a strong brine of cold water and salt and soaking the garment from twelve to twenty-four hours. Of course this should be done just before going to the laundry, and the salt should not be allowed to dry in it. This is especially good for all shades of pink and green, and colors once set this way will be bright as long as it would be reasonable to expect it. A strong solution of alum water is good, particularly with blues and the more delicate shades of brown, but its effect is not so lasting as that of salt, and it is sometimes necessary to renew the bath after the first three or four washings.

THE "Do Do Room" is the most interesting feature of a New York home, according to a writer—a completely equipped play room, where the word don't is never uttered. The idea of this room originated with paterfamilias, whose childhood was rendered unhappy by continually hearing "Don't do this!" or "Don't do that!" The room itself is a large sunny place, splendidly ventilated by plenty of windows, which are safely barred. One end of the hardwood floor is uncovered, while the other has a thick woolen rug, fastened down so securely that acrobatic feats or any amount of running or sliding cannot loosen it. The walls, which are deadened, so that noises cannot penetrate to other parts of the house, are covered with blue paper from which finger prints can be easily washed off. The pictures and electric lights are caged, this precaution making possible a mild game of baseball or any amount of handball or beanbag tossing. The chairs (minus rockers) and the tables are made with rounded corners. The fear of breaking dainty bric-a-brac does not bother the little inmates of the "Do Do Room" and the built-in bookcases, where favorite books and magazines abound, have no glass doors to be kept away from, or silk curtain which must not be touched

BY EDNA EGAN.

WHAT though the stout lady sighs to be thin? It is not so everywhere. There is Mecca for the fat in Ibibio—and that's in Nigeria.

Many and mysterious rites govern the lives of the women of the Ibibios, who have their secret societies, jealously guarded from men. According to Mrs. D. Amaury Talbot, wife of a prominent official of the country, these societies strike a note between freemasonry and trade unionism, and form the only safeguard of the Ibibio women against the tyranny of their menfolk.

One of the customs of these women is to go in procession to a certain pool in the garb of Lady Godiva. All men must keep indoors during this ceremony ,and any "Peeping Tom" who seeks to intrude on this, one of the most sacred of the feminine mysteries, used to be liable to the death penalty. Even today he is heavily fined, and would be hardly likely to live to see another such festival.

But the strangest institution is known as the fatting-house. The first great event in the life of an Ibibio girl is her entrance into the fatting-house, where she is kept in seclusion for a few months, allowed to eat as much as she likes, and is pampered on every side. Free-born girls, of good family, go twice and sometimes three times, into the fatting-house before their marriage.

The second period varies, according to the wealth of the family, from a few weeks to two years, and girls of good position who are regarded as likely to repay the expenditure by the man's dowry money are sometimes sent a third time into the fatting-house.

The result is that they ultimately emerge, to the admiration of their adoring relatives and to the townfolk at large, perfect mountains of flesh.

"A day is set apart," said Mrs. Talbot, "for the first appearance of the girls of each town who are ready to emerge from the fatting-house. On several occasions we have been present when these swollen specimens of femininity strutter through the marketplace, enjoying their brief hour of importance, while the men, who at every other period of a woman's existence are looked upon as of superior race, draw back admiringly to give them passage.

"The wooers, who stand during this parade appraising the merits and value of the various debutantes, afterward hurry to the parents with offers of dowry. A marriage is speedily arranged for each, and the young bride quickly finds her place amid the new surroundings, no longer petted, spoiled, and pampered, the center of attention for whom her family stint and deny themselves, but only too often the slighted, hard-worked drudge of her new lord."

The etiquette of marriage differs widely in different lands. In Russia the night before the ceremony a dance is given which lasts all night, and on the actual day of the marriage the bridegroom and his friends walk about the village playing musical instruments and throwing sugar to the children.

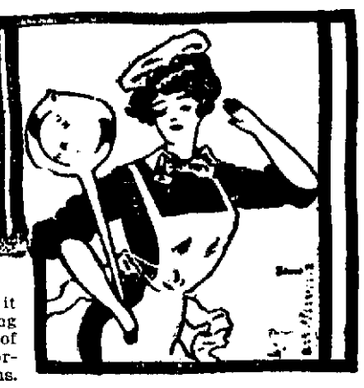
In Spain etiquette is so restrictive in courtship, and it is so difficult for young people to get to know one another, that one wonders how they ever manage to get married at all. Even when, after many difficulties, the engagement is accomplished, the parents have a deciding voice in fixing the date; and, as they prefer long engagements, the wedding day is usually fixed somewhere in the dim future.

The best man and maid of honor are expected not only to fulfill the usual duties, but to contribute—sometimes very substantially—to the expenses of the wedding feast. Wedding cake is unknown, but instead packets of sugared almonds are distributed among the guests and sent by post to them who are unable to be present.

A Norwegian wedding is a delightful spectacle.

The picturesque Norwegian national costume is worn, and the wedding party—in pretty carriages or on foot—walks or drives in procession to the church. After the ceremony there is a dance on the village green, with a violin for accompaniment, till it is time for supper. The next day the festivities are resumed, and possibly they may extend to the day after.

THE KITCHEN



Graham Gems.

Three cups of graham flour (sift it if you want to), 2 teaspoons baking powder, 1 egg, 1 cup milk, ½ cup of water, ½ teaspoon of salt. Beat thoroughly and pour into heated gem pans. Bake 15 to 20 minutes.

Meat Pie.

Cook 3 pints of potatoes until done, mash and add a little cream and salt. Spread in the pie dish like a paste, fill with thin slices of underdone meat, either beef, mutton, veal or chicken, laid in thickly. Pour over them some gravy and 1 wineglass of catchup. Cover thick with mashed potatoes and bake till brown about 25 minutes.

Oysters A La Dumas.

Mix together in a bowl a heaping teaspoon of salt, ½ a teaspoon of white pepper, 1 small shallot chopped very fine, a teaspoon of chopped chives, ½ a teaspoon of minced parsley, a teaspoon of olive oil, 6 drops of table sauce, a saltspoon of table salt, and 5 tablespoons of vinegar. Mix thoroughly and serve as a sauce for raw oysters.

Steamed Fruit Pudding.

Mix a cup of seedless raisins, the same of cleaned currants, the same of shredded citron, and the same of chopped suet. Dust over 4 tablespoons of flour. Add 4 tablespoons of brown sugar and a ½ cup of molasses, into which you have stirred ½ teaspoon of soda dissolved in a tablespoon of water. Stir in a pint and a half of rolled oats, add 2 well-beaten eggs, a teaspoon of cinnamon, pinch of nutmeg. Pack into a mold, cover and steam for 2 or more hours (continuously). Serve with liquid pudding sauce.

Candied Orange Peel.

Remove all white membrane from peel. Cut peel with scissors into long strips ¼ inch wide. Boil for 20 minutes in clear water, skim out from water, then repeat until it has boiled in four waters. Measure the peel and return to saucepan with an equal measure of granulated sugar. The moisture from the peel will melt the sugar. Boil gently in this sirup as long as possible, i. e., until sirup is boiled away, stirring carefully lest it burn. Spread peel on large platters to dry, tossing frequently with forks, and sprinkle granulated sugar over it. When cold pack in tight tin boxes and it will keep moist for weeks.

Lucana Potatoes.

Wash and bake six large potatoes, cut a slice from the top of each potato, scoop out the inside and mash. To three cupfuls of mashed potato add six cupfuls of finely chopped ham, two tablespoonfuls of finely chopped parsley, whites of two eggs, well beaten, four tablespoonfuls of cream or rich milk, salt and pepper to taste. Line potato shells with this mixture, place in each cavity a poached egg, and cover well the mixture and bake until browned. Poach the egg delicately. Boiled stuffed potatoes are popular.

Delmonico Potatoes.

Reheat 2 cups cold boiled potatoes cut in dice in 1¼ cups white sauce. Put in buttered baking dish, cover with buttered crumbs, add to potatoes ½ cup grated mild cheese, arranging potatoes and cheese in alternate layers before covering with crumbs.

White Sauce—Two tablespoons butter, 1 cup milk, 2 tablespoons flour, ¼ teaspoon salt, few grains pepper. Put butter in a saucepan, stir until melted and bubbling, add flour mixed with seasoning and stir until thoroughly blended. Pour on gradually milk, adding about one-third at a time, stirring until well mixed, then beating until smooth and glossy.

New England Deviled Clams.

Put 2 tablespoons of butter into a saucepan and fry in it a chopped onion. Add 1 cup of canned tomatoes, a pinch of powdered mace, and salt and paprika to taste. Cook for five minutes, add a tablespoon of flour, take from the fire, and add 2 eggs slightly beaten. Add 3 dozen prepared clams, chopped fine. Mix thoroughly, fill buttered clam shells, cover with crumbs dot with butter, and bake brown.

20,000 SUNDAY'S CROWD AT WINONA

Bible Conference Enjoys Greatest Day in Its 20 Years' History.

Warsaw, Ind., Aug. 30.—With Billy Sunday, William J. Bryan and Schumann-Heink as the main attractions, the Winona Bible conference experienced the greatest day in its twenty years of existence yesterday. Twenty thousand persons were on the grounds. At least 7,500 of them came in automobiles from cities and towns within a radius of 100 miles. Actual counting showed more than 1,500 automobiles parked along the driveways.

William J. Bryan was the morning speaker in the auditorium. He spoke to an audience of 6,000 persons. Billy Sunday addressed the overflow in one of the greatest outdoor meetings ever held at Winona. In the afternoon Mr. Bryan introduced Rev. Mr. Sunday in the auditorium, then went to the hillside to assist Evangelist "Bob" Jones and other speakers in addressing the crowd that could not be accommodated inside. Meetings also were conducted at Indian Mound by Rev. W. E. Biederwolf, and at another point by Mrs. W. A. Sunday and Mrs. William Asher.

Prof. E. O. Excell of Chicago, led the chorus of more than 600 voices. Among the singers were 150 evangelistic singers. Mme. Schumann-Heink, who came from New York to Winona to sing, free of charge before the Bible conference, was in the audience.

PREPARE TO DRYDOCK RAISED SUBMARINE

Nothing Yet Divulged Regarding Conditions Inside the F-4.

Honolulu, Aug. 30.—Work preliminary to the drydocking of the submarine F-4, lost in the Honolulu harbor with 22 men March 26, and raised yesterday, was under way today. It was expected the craft would be placed in dry dock tomorrow. Until then nothing definite can be announced as to what caused the disaster. The F-4 was raised by the pontoon method, six special pontoons, each with lifting capacity of 60 tons having been constructed at the Mare Island, California, navy yard for the purpose after all other methods proved unavailing.

The actual raising operation yesterday occupied two hours, the plans of the engineers working without a hitch. The boat was towed into the harbor where all the shipping including the interned German gunboat, Geier, lowered flags to half mast.

When the submarine has been placed in dry dock a board composed of Rear Admiral Clifford J. Boush, commandant of the navy station; Lieutenant Kirby R. Crittendon and Naval Constructor Julius A. Furer will begin a thorough investigation to learn the cause of the disaster.

Nothing has been divulged by the naval officials regarding conditions if known, inside the vessel.

RUMORED LOSS OF TRANSPORT DENIED

Ottowa, Ont., Aug. 30.—Official denial was given here last night to the report contained in the Berlin message by wireless to Sayville, N. Y., that a British troop ship carrying 2,000 Canadian troops had been sunk off the Scilly islands on August 15. The military authorities issued the following statement regarding the report:

"Between the 31st of July and the 24th of August only two troop ships with more than 300 troops on board have been despatched from Canada and they have both arrived safely at their destinations. Moreover, every troop ship bearing Canadian troops which was at sea on August 15 has arrived safely at its destination. There is no Canadian troop ship overdue and if the story coming via Sayville has any basis for truth it must refer to the torpedoing of the Canadian Northern steamship Royal Edward in the Aegean, the report of which event reached Canada August 17."

THE BERLIN REPORT.

Berlin, Saturday, Aug. 28.—(By wireless to Sayville, Aug. 29.)—Passengers on the Holland-American line steamship Ryadan arriving in Amsterdam bring a report that a British transport with 2,000 Canadian troops on board was torpedoed off the Scilly islands on August 15. It is said about 1,000 men were saved.

Romp Day Wed. Sept. 1

The annual Romp day will be held at Robison park on Wednesday, September 1. Every boy and girl in Fort Wayne and Allen county is invited. It is just one big day of fun from morning till night. The biggest candy treat of the year is on Romp day. You remember the big baskets of all-day suckers? There were 5,000 of them in the baskets last year and there will be just as many on September 1. Even the grownups can't keep out of the candy scramble. Then there are the baseballs from the theater roof, the copper trail, the greased pole, the big parade, the awarding of the four bicycles and the big doll. The central event is the annual popularity contest. The girl polling the largest number of votes will receive a diamond ring. The girls are all so lovely and charming that you will have difficulty in deciding which one you really prefer. The voting is free in the Popularity contest and every man, woman, girl and boy should show their interest by voting for their favorite candidate. It does not matter whether you know them personally or not. Just vote for the one you like best.

STREET RAILWAY MEN FORM ORGANIZATION

Union Will Be Perfected at Meeting to Be Held in Near Future.

After several weeks of hard work an organization of street railway men has been organized in Fort Wayne to be known as Division No. 682, Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes of America. The membership is composed of motormen and conductors on the city lines, but how many are identified with the new organization has not been announced. A meeting will be held in the near future for the purpose of perfecting the organization. Delegates to the Fort Wayne Federation of Labor will be selected and delegates also will be named to the state convention to be held at Gary, September 28, 29 and 30. Under the provisions of the new union there is a death benefit of from $200 to $800; a total disability benefit of the same amount; an old age pension of $800, after the members have attained ages of fifty-five years and have belonged to the organization twenty years.

Accident Delays Traffic.

Traffic on the South Wayne line was delayed for half an hour Sunday evening, as the result of a Ford automobile, driven by N. L. BenDure, 216 East Leith street, crashing into South Wayne car, No. 207, in charge of Conductor Charles H. Close and Motorman Fred Wells. The Ford was badly damaged, but BenDure and the other occupants of the car escaped uninjured. The accident occurred at Kinnard and South Wayne streets.

Thrilling Tales of Love and Adventure

A Real, Livin' Bill

By Annette Angert

DAVE and Jon was a heap contrarier than any mule that ever lived. The fool streak didn't run in any of the other Minders; seemed like it jest centered in Dave and Jon, who was twins. But they got cured of it.

They was the only childurn their pap and mother had for twenty years; and then along come another'n, a boy—and a boy so fine-lookin' and so promisin' that he made up for all the years between him and Dave and Jon. His pap and mother named him Bill, for his Grandpap Minder; and the way they went on over that thar boy did shore tickle everybody. It was Bill this, and Bill that; the sun rose and set in Bill—as well as the moon and stars; the world turned only for Bill's sake.

And as the years begun to add theirselves together on the boy's head, he growed still finer-lookin' and still smarter. His hair was as yaller as gold, and it curled up like the feelers of wild grapevines, and he wore them thar curls until he had to cut 'em off hisself, too! His eyes was as blue as the sky, and his skin was as soft as a girl's. And not only did the old folks dote on little Bill; Dave and Jon, great hulks of men and as brown from sunburn as Indians, worshiped him.

Well, when Dave and Jon each took to hisself a wife, of course, they left the old cabin on the Blackfern's crest. Jon went down the east slope a little ways, and built hisself a house amongst the Buckners, who he had married into; Dave went down the west slope to live amongst the Simpsons, his wife's people.

When Bill was about twenty-four, their pap he up and died, and soon after that their mother she follered him. So Bill found hisself alone in the cabin on top o' the Blackfern. Bill didn't like to be by hisself a bit; he was one o' these fellers what likes to have comp'ny around. And he was as open-faced and as bright when he had got to be a young man as he was when he was a boy. But he wasn't as big and strong as his two brothers.

When the old woman's funeral had been held by a preacher from acrost the state line, and fresh dirt had oncet more been banked up under the big beech that spread out over the little buryin' ground of the Minders, which was square on top o' the mountain, Bill started back to his lonesome home. He hadn't no more'n got thar afore his brother Jon, now forty-some-odd years old and a-turnin' gray in his hair and beard, come up to him and put one hand on his arm.

"Bill," says he, "you must come down and live with me from now on. You cain't stay here by yoreself."

Jest at that minute into the door of the cabin steps Dave.

"No," says Dave, "Bill must come down and stay at my house."

"I be durned if he does, neither," says Jon, a-puffin' out like a peacock. "He's a-goin' to stay at my house!"

"I've done laid my plans," says Dave, appealin' to Bill hisself, "to build an extry room to my cabin, jest for you. You shorely won't disapp'int me, will you, Bill?"

"Disapp'int nothin'!" Jon hollers. "I've done laid plans to do the same thing. You hain't no better to be disapp'inted than me, Dave Minder!"

Bill seen then that things was a-gettin clost to the fightin' place. He puts one hand on each of his big brothers' shoulders and gives 'em a shakin'.

"Now jest listen at that!" he tells 'em. "Hain't you fellers ashamed o' that thar fussin' right afore pore old mother's got good and still in the ground? Be ashamed o' yoreselves, Jon and Dave! You needn't to bother to fight about me; I'm a-goin' to stay right here, what I am."

And when he said that, they knowed he'd done spoke.

Jon turns back to Dave. "It was yore fault, consarn you!" he says, a-stickin' his fist up under Dave's nose. "Hadn't 'a' been for you, I'd 'a' got Bill to come down to my house!"

"Don't you git too durned promiscuous with your gab, Jon Minder!" says Dave, a-pushin' Bill, pore little feller, out o' the way. "If you do, you're li'ble to git a maulin' for it!"

Jon stands thar for about two minutes without movin' even his eyes, a-starin' at his twin brother like he could 'a' killed him and slept good over it.

"Don't you worry none about me a'speakin' to you any more," he says to Dave, when he could talk for his madness. "As long as I live I'll never speak to you ag'in, by gyar! And don't you never let me catch you on my side o' this here mountain—d'ye understand that, Dave Minder?"

Dave he was that contrary he wouldn't make no answer. He turns to Bill and says to him:

"Bill, you've heerd what that thar durn fool thar had to say to me. I'll never speak to him ag'in as long as I live and breathe the breath o' life; and Bill, he'd better never show his weasel of a head on my side o' the Blackfern, neither, if he don't want holes shot in it. And if you cain't come down and live with me, Bill, why you can shorely come down and see us now and then. We hain't got much of a place; but we can keep the rain off when it's a-rainin', and we can feed you when you're hongry. Good-by, Bill. Remember the latchstring at my house hangs on the outside. Goodby, Bill."

With that he makes a face at Jon and stalks off down the mountain with some of his wife's folks.

Jon told Bill goodby, and told him the same things Dave had told him about comin' down to see him, and then told him good-by ag'in.

So that's the way the twin brothers got at the outs. I reckon little Bill got more good things to eat, though, on account of it, than anybody in the state; Dave and his wife and Jon and his wife got to pullin' and hawin' to see which could git up the best grub to send up on the mountain to Bill, and each time they'd come they'd try to git Bill to say somethin' ag'in the 'tother side, But Bill would never do that.

So the boy got to takin' life easy. All the things he wanted to eat was brung right to his door, most of it already cooked; and if he fell short any time, he jest took his rifle and went out into the woods and shot some game. To keep from gittin' lonesome, he traded around and got a banjo and a hound dog; and he'd set thar in the door for hours at a time a-pickin' that banjo, with that thar hound a-layin' aside of him.

And then things got serious on the Blackfern. Dave's wife's people and Jon's wife's people took matters in their own hands, and got to watchin' for one another with guns. One of Jon's side got shot in the shoulder, and one of Dave's side got it in the arm, both the same day.

So Bill decided to leave, to see if it wouldn't quiet the fussin' some. He was mighty down in the mouth about it. Besides, he had a little bit of an idee about makin' some money in town, which was about eight miles off. He let 'em know that he'd decided to leave on account o' their fussin' about him. And the first thing they knowed, he'd shore left for town. He couldn't take his dog along; but he left some wet spots on the back of its neck.

It seemed mighty lonesome along the Blackfern after the boy had gone. The hound wouldn't stay at neither one o' the twin brothers' houses, but moped around a-lookin' for Bill, jest like good dogs will do. Jon was afeard o' goin' into the home cabin on account o' runnin' upon Dave thar, and Dave was the same way; so they let the old house alone.

The summer drifted on, and the leaves begun to turn brown on the chestnut trees—and the chestnuts theirselves was a-beginnin to git ripe. Then the leaves begun to fall, and the chestnuts begun to drap off. The two brothers missed little Bill more'n ever then; it was the first time in years that they'd set out to gether chestnuts without him. And each of the sides stayed on their own side of the mountain; thar was no more shootin' at one another after the boy had gone.

Then a wagon from town come a-drivin' along the windin' road and stopped on the crest o' the mountain, and the driver axed for to be showed either to Dave or Jon Minder's. Dave got the word first, and he come a-runnin' up to the town wagon with a rifle in one hand and a gray squirrel in the t'other. And in the wagon he seen a long pine box.

Jon got the news at about the same time it reached his brother Dave. He come a-cuttin' the mustard up the mountain-side, with the big old tears a-blindin' him until he couldn't hardly see.

They set the box out on the ground, and the town wagon drove back. The Minders had axed the driver how it happened; but the driver didn't know anything about it.

They carried the box out along the top o' the mountain, and to the old buryin' ground under the spreadin' beech, whar they dug a grave. Dave and Jon hadn't spoke yit, though. But both of 'em was a-takin ' it to heart pow'ful; both of 'em was a snubbin' into their half-gray beards like childurn what's been whupped. They hated theirselves for it. They didn't open the box, for they felt like they couldn't bear to see pore little Bill. The preacher, who happened to be a-visitin' in the community, come to preach the funeral. He was a' old man, and mighty plain in his talk. He'd been told how Bill come to leave his people. And he shore brought out some of his mind in that thar sermon thar on top o' the Blackfern Mountain!

When Jon had got to his house after it was all over, he set down in the door and put his head on his wife's knee and cried, pore old man! Dave he done the same thing. At each of their cabins thar was still a few old-fashioned flowers left, what the frost hadn't got. Both Dave and Jon took all o' the flowers they had or could git and took 'em out under the spreadin' beech. But they hadn't spoke yit.

The next day Dave and Jon each sat in his house and carved out bill's name on a slab o' slate-rock. And along in the shank o' the evenin' both of 'em took the stones to the graveyard to put 'em up. They met right at the fresh grave. And thar, with the mound atween 'em, each o' them thar gray-headed men put out his hand; and the t'other took it and shook it mighty hard.

Then they spoke at the same time, and each one of 'em said the very same thing:

"What durn fools we was!"

With that they set the stones up at the grave, one at the head and t'other at the foot, with the name turned inards.

And then who should step out o' the bushes right afore their eyes but the real, livin' Bill Minder, dressed in store-bought clothes and all shaved up as smooth as a button! He'd worked in town until he'd got money enough to start the venture he'd been a-thinkin' on for several years.

"I'd like for you fellers to tell me," he says, a-smilin' in his good old way, "jest when I died. And I'd also like for you fellers to tell me," he goes on, "jest what you done with that thar box o' fruit trees I sent out here yisterday!"

Dave and Jon stared, then they all laughed and shook hands.

Naming The Day

By Enos Emory

HELEN was "having the girls over" for the afternoon, and, as usual, they had insisted that she make candy, for her candy seemed better than anyone else's, so the little lamp under the chafing-dish danced merrily, and the girls in their light frocks chattered as girls always will.

Soon, with much teasing of a rosy-faced Helen, the little party broke up, and she came into the house with a faraway look in her eyes that told only too well the subject of her thoughts. It was only a few minutes before the door bell rang, and Robert, "her" Robert, strode into the room, and took her hands in his. Before long they were deep in discussion of the little house they had selected, and of other subjects dear to the hearts of those who are going to be brides.

On the other side of the room the telephone bell tinkled, and tinkled again, and with a little pout Helen got up to answer it.

"Yes, yes. Of course."

Her face white and drawn, her hand at her throat, she turned to Robert, as she put back the receiver.

"Oh, Rob, they called up from the station to say that father has been hurt and they are bringing him home."

During the bustle of preparation, and breaking the news to her mother, Helen scarcely had time to think, until the still form on the stretcher was brought in. The doctor arrived almost at the same time, and went into the sunny room where they had laid her father. She waited outside the door, one hand in Robert's the other playing nervously with her handkerchief. At last the doctor came out. He looked at her gravely.

"It is very serious, Miss Brown, but I think he will live."

In after years, the days that followed seemed like an evil dream to Helen. The long struggle for life, the fight won, but leaving merely the shadow of the strong man that had once been her father, the final verdict of permanent invalidism.

After that he had to give up his position, and the question of a livelihood faced them. They decided that they could not keep up the home that had been theirs for many years, and, with a heart wrench, they packed their pretty things, and moved over to the other side of the town, where they could rent a small house for less than a quarter of what they had been paying. Even then, it was not long before they began to wonder how to make the ends meet. The comfortable bank account that her father had accumulated through the years was leaking away in a horrifying manner, for the mere necessities of life.

They must do something to bring in some money. But what? Helen had been brought up in luxury; before she could master shorthand or bookkeeping they would be without a cent in the world. There was not time for that. One day one of the friends who had still kept up her friendship, as many others had not, was talking it over with her.

"Why don't you and your mother make candy and sell it?"

The more Helen thought this over, the more she felt inclined to try it. She did not feel very hopeful, but at least it was better than nothing. Resolved to make the attempt, at least, she spent part of their fast vanishing hoard for the necessary pots and pans and supplies, then she started around among her friends to see if she could get some orders. The result rather surprised her. Even those who had been a little inclined to look the other way when they saw her on the street were none the less eager for her candy, and she came back from her first afternoon's work with orders for about 50 pounds.

In serviceable gingham aprons, she and her mother set to work in the hot kitchen, and the familiar processes of grating chocolate, measuring sugar and milk, gave Helen a little time to think things over. She had been wondering why Robert had not come over so often recently. He seemed preoccupied and strange when he did. She had tried to keep the thought out of her mind, but now it came back with renewed force. Was Robert tired of her? Had he loved her at all? Was he trying to "break off" with her? Was he ashamed of her poverty, and the district she was obliged to live in?

He was coming over the next Monday evening, and she decided that she would have a serious talk with him, and find out how he really did feel.

All that week she and her mother were busy at the candy making. Friends of her friends, hearing about her new venture, were sending in orders. It was almost more than she could do to fill them. If she could only get a standing order, that she could be sure of, she could hire a girl to do the actual work, and she and her mother could give their time to directing it. Helen was anything but dull, and finally she remembered the restaurant she had been accustomed to eat lunch at when she was in town shopping. She thought her candy was better than theirs, and the manager was such a nice old man, why not see if she could not get a regular order from them? No sooner thought of than done. She ran to the telephone and called him up. He said he would see her Monday afternoon, and told her to bring along a sample box.

The rest of the week passed in a whirl. Monday! She might get that order from the restaurant, and Rob was coming over. She hoped she would find that there was a real cause for his dereliction. At last the great day came.

Arrayed in her remaining best, with a box of candy under her arm, and her heart in her mouth, she went in to see the manager. He laughed and joked with her, talked about everything but business, and ate candy from her box voraciously, at the same time looking her over keenly, though she did not notice it. At last he said:

"You are a pretty young girl to be doing business with. How do I know you would get the stuff here on time, if I did order a little?"

"You just try me and you'll see."

"You might let us have a few pounds then, to be delivered every day. Let's see; you can start with—"

He named an amount that made Helen gasp, and wonder how she was going to get that much out. But she said nothing. She would manage it somehow.

After a grateful thanks, she walked out, her head in the clouds. This meant success, it meant almost wealth to them, after the last few months. Her dream had come true, and she could almost see herself behind a mahogany desk in a real candy factory.

As she neared her home, the thought of Rob returned. What would she find out from him, what would be the result of the evening? Well, she could not affect the result, and would not if she could. If he did not want her—but her bravado left her. She did want him to want her, so much.

Eight o'clock came, struck on the clock in the hall, rang out from the clock in the dining room, and boomed out from the big church clock in the square. Then half past, then 9, but no Rob.

At last she crept into her bed, with an aching heart, and the tears would come, whether or no. What was the use of it all? What did her success matter, as long as she would not talk it over with Rob, as long as Rob did not care for her any more? Tired and unhappy, she sobbed herself to sleep.

Tuesday morning came. She and her mother started in on their big pile of orders, and after a siege at the telephone, Helen succeeded in finding a satisfactory girl, who said she would be right out. The fire was roaring, the sugar and butter and chocolate were being measured out with lightning like rapidity, when Helen heard an automobile stop in front of the house. Who could it be? Robert had no car, she knew.

Then there was a wild ringing of the bell, and with shouts of joy her great big Rob came tearing around the corner of the house and into the kitchen. He wrapped his arms round her, regardless of her protests.

"Helen, darling, I've got the surprise of your life for you. I didn't want to tell you until it was settled, but I have been so busy I was afraid you would think I did not like to come to see you any more. I'm to be manager of our Boston branch, and I've signed the lease for the little house. All you've got to do is to name the day."

Whereupon Helen gave a little gasp of joy, and I am sorry to say, proceeded to smear butter and chocolate all over the back of Rob's new coat, with one great big, joyous hug.

Their Vacation

By Will Seaton

LUCRETIA stepped from beside the iron trolley wire pole, with its band of white, to the street and raised a commanding finger to the motorman. The open car grated along for some ten feet or so past her before coming to a stop.

Indignantly, she moved after the car; at the same time censuring the conductor.

"You are supposed to stop at the crosswalk!" she snapped, with one foot upon the running board.

"Sorry ma'm," apologized the cheerful-featured, slim little wearer of brass buttons. "All aboard," he added, extending an assisting hand.

With a disdainful jerk of her shoulder, she avoided the hand and flounced into the end of the seat. There she sat, with her forehead drawn into an irritable frown and with her lips pressed grimly together, as the car lurched forward and proceeded upon its way. Her eyes were searchlights, flashing their rays about in quest of annoyance, ever vigilant for trouble; for though but barely 30, Lucretia was gradually banishing the attractiveness of her girlhood beneath a mask of irascibility.

On this afternoon her forehead was contorted into more wrinkles than were customary; her lips were pressed more tightly together than usual. She had just left her husband's office, and remembrances of their conversation were far from agreeable to her. Her thoughts boiled. Andrew was so aggravating! Why didn't he ever do things the way she wanted him to—?

Her husband had informed her that he would be unable to leave for the mountains until the 14th of the month at the earliest, and she had wanted to have them go on the fifth. Some deal, some business with a realty company had to be settled before he could leave, her husband had told her.

"But why couldn't he arrange his business so as not to interfere with our vacation?" her thoughts reasoned, petulantly. "He never cares for my pleasure. . . ."

A burst of laughter, naturally related to a man of big proportions, roused her from her ill-humored reverie.

". . . And I says to the missis, 'You'll have to go to Seaview 'stead of the Peak House—the Peak House is too expensive,'" the stout man on the seat ahead was saying to the man with an exceedingly long neck, who was seated beside him.

Lucretia saw the latter sway forward his neck in a nod of approval.

"If I catered to the missis, she'd have me flat financially in a week," continued the fat man. "She's the most extravagant woman on earth."

"Oh, all of them are always kickin' about something or other," was the pessimistic retort of him with the elongated neck. "My wife expects me to wear a tuxedo around the house and smoke college boy cigarettes. Slippers, shirtsleeves and a pipe shock her sensibilities."

"Say, it's a funny thing about Andy," he exclaimed. "To hear him boast about his wife, you'd think he'd married the paragon of all virtues, yet he doesn't look so happy."

The snort of lengthy-necked Sam was perfectly audible to Lucretia.

"Paragon!" he ejaculated. "Tommy-rot! Didn't you ever notice that tired, hunted sort of look in Andy's eyes? Why my daughter Nellie knows his wife, and Nellie says that she nags Andy perpetually. Andy tries to appear cheerful, but you can bet that his bed of roses is mattressed with thorns."

Lucretia's nails bit into the leather of her handbag. The impudence of the man! To speak of her as "nagging"" Andrew! "Nagging" indeed!

Yet, his remarks haunted her.

And when she left the car at the railroad station, where she was to take a train for her suburban town, she made a determined effort to expel the man's words from her thoughts. But even on the train, they continually popped into her mind. She rebelled. She wasn't a nagger! She had a right to rebuke Andrew! Everything he did was contrary to her wishes!

Then one of the wrinkles smoothed itself from her forehead. She recalled the fact that the man with the long neck had said that Andrew never criticised her—that he boasted about her good qualities.

Well, why shouldn't Andrew speak well of her, she thought. Of course she didn't nag . . . !

Yet she began to wonder.

At 7 o'clock Andrew arrived home, a half hour late for supper, or rather dinner. He was hot and tired, and the look of resignation hovered nearer to the surface of his eyes.

Lucretia met him in the hallway.

"I worked a little late over the Mutual Realty papers, Lu," he stated apologetically. "I came to the conclusion that if I put in so much extra time each day, why, we could leave for the mountains by the ninth or by the tenth of the month, anyway."

To his surprise, Lucretia made no comment regarding his tardiness to the evening meal. Instead, she slipped an arm about him, her hand resting upon his shoulder.

"No, indeed, you will not figure away evenings in your stuffy little office, and tire yourself out by overwork," she declared, striving ineffectually to maintain a severity of tone. "We will leave for the mountains on the fourteenth or later, if necessary."

And throwing her other arm about him, she pressed her face against his tie and shirt front, making strange noises from her concealment.

"All—all right, honey!" agreed the bewildered husband, clasping his arms about her and soothingly patting her shoulder. "But what—what's the matter?"

Her arms tightened about him.

"I—I'm an—old nagger!" came from between sobs.

The Old Dress

By Walt Gregg.

TWO little girls sat under the old apple tree which grew beside the little brown house. Each little mouth was puckered up and each face wore a frown. Carefully placed on the ground beside them were two dolls, on whose faces, in contrast to their small mothers', were blissful though vacant smiles. But the dollies were waiting for the new clothes which the mothers were making, so, of course, they smiled, while the little girls were troubled by perspiring fingers, needle pricks, lost spools of thread and a limited knowledge of dressmaking.

"I think Arabella will look very nice in this white muslin, but I'll have to wash it 'fore she can wear it," said the little one in blue, whose name was Ruth.

"Yes, an' don't you think this pink dress will be pretty for Marie?" Grace, the second little mother, held up her diminutive bit of sewing. "Seems to me that hem looks kind of crooked, I wish I dared ask Alice to hem it for me. She's so cross today, I don't dare to go near her."

"Why, what's the matter with her, Gracie?"

"Oh, she's going away next week, an' she has to have a lot of clothes, she says, so she sews all day long, an' so does mamma, an' nobody cares if I have anything or not. Are you going to Edith's birthday party? I'm not! I don't want to!"

"Well, then, why don't you want to go to this party?"

"'Cause I can't have a new dress; now you know! Alice is making a lot of them, but they haven't any time to make me just one. I don't get anything an' she gets everything, an' I haven't had a new dress for years, an' years, an' years!"

Upstairs in the little brown house, her sister, Alice, was trying on one of the dresses which caused her small sister such envy. She stood near the window, in front of the dresser, admiring her new dress.

Hearing the children's voices, she went to the window and looked out. Down through the branches of the old apple tree she could see the two little heads bent over their sewing. She saw the dolls and their stiff smiles. Unconsciously, she listened to the little girls as they talked.

The next day Ruth and Grace were sitting, as usual, under the old apple tree with their dolls.

"I don't feel like sewing today, Ruthie, let's play house. This side of the tree can be your house, an' I'll have the other side. Now, I must go home an' get my house ready for you to come an' see me. Come, Marie."

"Gracie, your mamma's calling you."

"All right mamma. You stay here, Ruthie. I'll come right out again!"

She hurried into the house and up the stairs, calling, "What do you want, mamma?"

"Alice has something for you, dear."

She crossed the hall and looked into her sister's room. Alice stood there smiling. "Let's take off this old dress, Gracie, and try on something else."

"Oh, Alice, that can't be for me! A new dress! Why, I thought you were going to have them all. Oh, isn't it lovely. It's just beautiful. Don't you think it's lovely, mamma?"

She danced about the room, hugged Alice, hugged her mother, looked in the glass, and then ran to the window. "Oh, Ruthie, Ruthie, come up here, quick. I've got a new dress, an' now I can go to the party. Oh, goody!"

THE MARKETS

CORN AND HAY PRICES MAKE A JUMP UPWARD

The price of corn and hay on the local markets made a jump upward Monday morning, corn bringing ninety and ninety-one cents a bushel, a raise of three cents and hay selling for $14 and $15 a ton, a jump of three dollars. The advance in price may be accounted for by the fact that the receipts were small and bidding was very lively. Only five loads of hay appeared while the receipts in corn at the city scales was only two loads.

Millers and grain dealers of this city are of the opinion that the farmers in the vicinity of Fort Wayne are dissatisfied with the price on wheat and are refusing to sell the grain at a dollar a bushel. The receipts have been very low for the past three weeks and there seems to be no chance that the price will go up, consequently no wheat on the market. Wheat may advance in price this winter but never again do grain dealers expect to see the price soar up to $1.05 as it did last year.

Two loads of old oats that were weighed at the city scales Monday brought 57 cents a bushel while the price on new oats remained the same. Eleven loads brought prices varying from 35 to 45 cents a bushel. All other market were inactive.

CHICAGO GRAIN AND PROVISIONS

Chicago, Aug. 30.—A rush of buying from the short side lifted wheat ½c to 1c higher today at the opening with September at 97¾@98¼c and December at 95½@96¼c. Large holders let go freely for profit taking and the market soon receded, the reaction amounting to a range of ¾c to 1¼c. The market seemed to be a speculative one with little outside influence.

The close was weak at a net loss of 2c to 2¼c with September at 95¼c and December at 93½c.

Corn at the start showed an upturn of ⅝c to 1¼c on reports of frost in Nebraska and Iowa, killing frost being reported from near Mason City, Iowa. September opened at 74⅝@75c; an advance of 1c to 1⅛c and December at 64¼@64⅝c, a rise of ⅝c to 1¼c. Heavy offerings caused a recession of nearly a cent after which there was a slight rally.

The close was easy, a shade higher to ⅝c lower; September at 73½c and December at 63½@63⅝c.

Oats followed other grain in an early rise and then eased off.

THE DAY ON WALL STREET.

New York, Aug. 30.—Trading in war shares and kindred specialties at variable changes from last week's close was resumed at the outset of today's operations. The main feature was Texas company, which soon rose 6½ to 157, with a net gain of point for Mexican Petroleum at 86½. Coppers were again prominent, Tennessee gaining two at 58. Fertilizers added two points to recent advances. Crucible Steel was reactionary, losing two points to 74. United States Steel declined a reaction in the initial dealings, but soon advanced to 77, a gain of ⅝ over Saturday's final price.

The market broadened later, a demand for railway issues causing general strength. Union Pacific was the potential leader, advancing 1⅜ to 125⅝. New York Central rose 1¼ to 91¾ and Canadian Pacific, New Haven, Erie and Southern Railway preferred participated substantially. The Mexican situation was again reflected in the oil stocks, California Petroleum preferred rising 3 to 43½. Irregular tendencies developed in the war group, some receding 1 to 2 points while others rose vigorously.

Most gains were cancelled in the final hour, the entire list declining under moderately heavy offerings. The closing was heavy.

Familar Police Court Figure Will Spend 140 Days There.

"I don't care; it will be a good thing for me. I can't cut the booze around here and maybe I can get away from it down there. It doesn't fuss me a bit to have that handed to me."

That was what Eugene Beans Crawford delivered by way of valedictory in his cell at police headquarters after Judge Kerr had tagged him $100 and costs and thirty days at the state penal farm on his plea of guilty to public intoxication with three previous convictions, Monday morning. Crawford was picked up drunk Sunday by the police. He has been a familiar figure in the city court for many years and has been arrested and sent to jail so many times the count has been lost. A few weeks ago he was in and on a promise to take the pledge and keep sober he was allowed to go, with the court's promise that his next appearance would get him a term down on the plantation.

Brawlers Are Fined.

William Schulte was fined $20 and costs and Edward "Butch" Skelton drew $15 and costs on charges of disorderly conduct and Noah Weber was acquitted on a similar charge Monday morning in the city court. The arrests grew out of a miniature riot at the Burnett sale stables on Wells street Saturday afternoon following trouble Schulte had with Weber over a horse that Schulte had purchased at auction and later discovered had the heaves. He wanted Weber to take the horse back and refund the purchase price which Weber refused to do. Outside the stables a fight was started in which clubs and stones were said to have been used. Officers Paul, Kintz and Goeglein arrested Weber, Schulte and Skelton, but a companion of Schulte's got away. Weber suffered most severely in the battle. Both men who were found guilty paid their fines.

They Used Beer Bottles.

James Tinsley, a ditcher, and E. Seckman who seems to be little of anything, were arraigned in the city court on charges that grew out of a fight in rooms above the Poirson saloon, 501½ Calhoun street, Saturday night, in which both used beer bottles and in which Tinsley goth his head badly cut and battered. Both were drunk and each blamed the other for the trouble. On charges of disorderly conduct Tinsley was fined $5 and costs and Seckman drew a like amount for assault and battery. Both settled.

"Preacher's" Story Frazzles Out.

A man who gave the name of George Wilson and who following his arrest gave out a sad story of his downfall from a high place as a minister of the Presbyterian church, cut all the romantic trimmings from his story when he was arraigned and said that he had been employed in a St. Louis hospital and had once studied for the ministry. He at first told of holding prominent highly-paid pastorates in the west and that social drinking had caused his downfall. He was arrested Saturday evening at the Wabash passenger station by Detective Sergeant Joseph Brennen and was very drunk. Judge Kerr let him go.

Other City Court Cases.

Pete Van Ren, a Hollander employed as a freight handler, was arrested Saturday on complaint of his wife, who said Peterkin had been loafing and drinking for a week and had removed furniture from their home and taken chickens from their hennery and sold the property to get money to buy drink. He was continued until Tuesday.

Fred Lucie, charged with loitering, and Arthur McKenna, charged with drunkenness, were continued until September 4 under $100 bond each and will be investigated. They were together when arrested Saturday. Lucie had a check book on a bank in Logan county, Kansas.

Charles Meyers, Frank Mowery and Jack Williams, drunks, were turned loose. Other drunks were disposed of as follows: William Slagle, $1 and costs. William Sinclair, $1 and costs; August Hoxall, $5 and costs; Sam Carpenter, $5 and costs; John Dolan, who gets back in jail as soon as he gets out, $5 and costs.

Henry Parfield, a loiterer picked up in Lakeside by Detective Sergeant Peter Lenk, was sent to jail in default of $100 bond. He was continued until Tuesday for investigation.

Andy Kiel, charged with exceeding the speed limit, was continued indefinitely.

BREAD THIEVES AGAIN.

The Scherer Baking company report to police headquarters that sixty loaves of fresh bread left at the Lamke & Lemke grocery, 1436 West Main street was stolen between 5 and 6:30 o'clock Monday morning.
